Chair’s Welcome — By Aaron Kupchik

November, 2012

It is a pleasure to welcome you on behalf of the Division on Corrections and Sentencing. Thank you all for your membership, and so many of you for your active participation.

Divisions play an important role within larger academic organizations. They offer opportunities to meet and reconnect with others who have similar research interests, and to participate in work that helps define and implement what we study. They allow us a smaller, more manageable academic home within which we can network, collaborate, and learn from each other.

The Division on Corrections and Sentencing has done well at providing these opportunities, thanks to the diligence and vision of the many people who have worked hard to create and establish the Division. But we can strive to do even more. In particular, there are three tasks I believe we should target. One is to integrate more graduate students and junior faculty through quality participation. The goal here is not just to have young scholars join the Division and then watch as old friends reconnect, but to have them become a part of the organization and gain from its activities.

A second is to increase academic-practitioner interactions. The Division is very academic-focused, and could benefit from greater involvement from practitioners; as a result, both research and practice could be better informed. A third is to facilitate more collaborative research throughout the year. The Division could be a forum through which members with similar interests communicate regularly, inform each other’s work, and collaborate in various ways. I welcome any suggestions for how we can achieve these goals, or of other important tasks that you would like to see addressed; feel free to email me at akupchik@udel.edu.

I look forward to talking about these and other topics when we meet in Chicago in November. Please try to attend our breakfast meeting, where we honor the winners of the Division’s awards, discuss Division business, and eat overpriced hotel muffins. The meeting is on Thursday November 15, 8:00-9:20, in the Monroe Room (6th floor). Also, mark your calendars for the Division’s Happy Hour, which will be held off-site this year at the Flat Top Stir-Fry Grill, 30 S. Wabash, on Thursday the 15th from 7:00 to 8:30. The location is only one block from the hotel, and there will be free alcohol! Please come by!

Peace Education Program: A Cognitive Behavioral Treatment

The “what works” literature in Corrections has revealed that cognitive behavioral treatment (CBT) strategies are among the most effective strategies for reducing recidivism. This note is an invitation to take a quick look at one program—the Peace Education Program (PEP), known as the “Inner Peace Class” at the Dominguez State Jail in San Antonio, TX. It is a volunteer-based educational program, designed around the teachings of a noted humanitarian, Prem Rawat, on the possibility of attaining personal peace. It is a message for all people, regardless of legal status.

Over the last five years, approximately

The American Society of Criminology is an international organization whose members pursue scholarly, scientific, and professional knowledge concerning the measurement, etiology, consequences, prevention, control, and treatment of crime and delinquency.

900 inmates have come through this program at Dominguez. The staff at the Dominguez unit report that in-prison behavior of participants has improved and that very few have returned to this prison. These reports have attracted the attention of the Criminal Justice community in South Texas. A program evaluation is being planned.

Below is a link to an 11-minute video that showcases the program. It features commentaries by the Warden, Chief of Security, and participants, as well as Criminal Justice professors from the University of Texas at San Antonio. You might find it hopeful and interesting.

Joshua Cochran is a doctoral candidate in the College of Criminology and Criminal Justice at Florida State University. His research focuses on the effects of punishment, prison experiences, perceptions of justice, and the causes of offending. Cochran’s dissertation work examines prisoners’ visitation experiences and the implications of those experiences on prison social order and future criminal behavior. Recently, he completed work on a federally funded project sponsored by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention with Drs. Daniel P. Mears and Avinash Bhati examining juvenile justice sanctions. He recently received the 2012 Graduate Research and Creativity Award for the Social and Behavioral Sciences from Florida State University. Prior to undertaking his doctoral studies, Cochran received a B.A. in Crime, Law and Justice, International Studies, and in German from the Pennsylvania State University in 2008, and an M.S. in Criminology and Criminal Justice from Florida State University in 2010. He is expected to graduate this Spring.

Jordan Hyatt is a doctoral student in the Department of Criminology and the Senior Research Coordinator at the Jerry Lee Center of Criminology, both at the University of Pennsylvania. His current research focuses on the impact of cognitive behavioral therapy on high-risk probationers, the use of social network data in criminal justice applications, and the integration offender risk-assessment into sentencing decisions. Hyatt previously received an M.S. in Criminology from the University of Pennsylvania and graduated from Villanova University School of Law, where he was a Public Interest Scholar.

Phil Mulvey is a doctoral candidate at Arizona State University in the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice. His research interests principally focus on the social control of marginalized populations and specifically examine individuals with mental illness who come into contact with the criminal justice system. Phil’s dissertation, On the Brink: Experiences of Women with Mental Illness on Probation, is a year long mixed methods study of women on the Severely Mentally Ill (SMI) caseload at Maricopa County Adult Probation in Phoenix Arizona. His study explores the lives of women with mental illness on probation, their pathways into the criminal justice system, their relationships with probation officers and the court, and aspects of social control as these women navigate both the benevolent control of the mental health system and the coercive control of the criminal justice system. As part of the project Phil is analyzing five years worth of intake data for the SMI caseload, conducting qualitative interviews with SMI women offenders and their probation officers, and completing ten months worth of ethnographic observations at the mental health problem solving court in Maricopa County Arizona. Phil will defend his dissertation in April of 2013.
