An Incorrigible Positivist
Jack P. Gibbs, Vanderbilt University

It could be that no one ever came to criminology with a more wretched education. I refer not just to the small rural schools that I attended in Brown County, Texas, where I was born in 1927. Given that my dad lost his small farm in the Great Depression (about 1932, I think) and we were sorely pressed for many years after, perhaps I was fortunate to finish high school. Indeed, I might not have finished had I not been a chronic jock (a fairly good student but very unhappy and angry). I was awarded a football scholarship at USC, where I arrived with a cardboard box as a suitcase; but I left within ten days after the culture shock of living in a very rich fraternity (there was no jock dorm at the time). So had I not served a hitch in the army commencing at the very end of WWII, I might never have attended a university. The hitch gave me the very limited but essential resources for higher education; however, I was so ignorant that I squandered the first few years in third-rate schools, starting with Daniel Baker College, now rightly defunct.

Had I not moved from Texas Tech to TCU in January of 1949, I would have had no mentors to forget. But at TCU I became a student of Austin L. Porterfield, who introduced me to criminology and inspired me to continue beyond the B.A. Alas, I do not recall exactly why Porterfield inspired me; hopefully, I dimly appreciated what the old fellow was doing—teaching 12 hours, chairing a small department, and publishing. Yet there is a mystery. I am convinced that Porterfield was not an excellent teacher, though he had more than a dash of charisma, for he never so much as introduced me to the great classical sociological works (e.g., I somehow stumbled on Durkheim’s Suicide while browsing). What, then, did he do? I wish I knew. Perhaps he gave me something really precious—an interest in and respect for research. In any case, I wrote my M.A. thesis, a study of Fort Worth homicide cases, under Porterfield. The thesis was god-awful, but my research was the basis for a paper that we co-authored (though Porterfield really wrote it) and published in Sociology and Social Research (1953).

Fall Meeting in Montreal
John S. Goldkamp
Temple University, Program Clair

Thanks to a very enthusiastic response to our call for papers from many quarters and the hard work of many, we are happy to unveil the preliminary program for the fall meeting of the American Society of Criminology to be held in Montreal.

Before pointing to a number of highlights of the program, I’d like to thank those chiefly responsible for its completion. First, the program has benefited greatly from the advice and support of ASC President Don Gottfredson. Sarah Hall, as usual, has performed in her flawlessly efficient and generous fashion. Peter Jones of Temple, the Program Co-chair, has spent many hours on the telephone, sitting at the computer to move the program to this preliminary stage. Each of the Program Committee Associates has worked tirelessly for many months. They are Anne Campbell, Jacqueline Cohen, Kathleen Daly, Timothy Flanagan, Edith Flynn, James Fyfe, Stephen Gottfredson, Jack Greene, Michael Hough, John Laub, Candace McCoy, Ronald Roesch, and Ralph Taylor. Andre Normandeau, the Local Arrangements Chair, and his colleagues at the Societe de Criminologie du Quebec—especially Louise Biron—and the University of Montreal have also contributed to the special character of this year’s program.

This year’s program not only includes a wide variety of especially stimulating panels, roundtables, poster sessions and workshops, but has been successful in incorporating an unusual degree of international participation in line with this year’s theme: "Criminology Today: Com-
AROUND THE ASC

The Adlers are leaving Washington University, St. Louis. Patricia is taking up duties as Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of Colorado, Boulder; Peter has been appointed Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Sociology at the University of Denver.

Gregg Barak, Professor and Chair of the Department of Criminal Justice at Alabama State University, has been appointed Book Review Editor for Crime and Social Justice.

Susette Talarico, Associate Professor and Director of the Criminal Justice Program in the Department of Political Science at the University of Georgia, is co-editor of Court Administration: Issues and Responses, published by the Carl Vinson Institute of Government.

Bruce Woldorf of Eastern Kentucky University is co-editor of a new book, Special Education in the Criminal Justice System, published by Merrill. The volume is unique in its focus, and is specially prepared for practitioners in the field of corrections.

Charles R. Fenwick, Department of Criminal Justice, Trenton State College, was recently selected as a 1987/88 Fulbright Scholar to Japan. This year, 62 Americans were nominated for research awards to Japan and 6 were finally selected. Fenwick will be a Visiting Professor at Kobe University (Faculty of Law) and will be associated with Tokyo and Kyoto Universities. His research will focus on modernization, cultural change, and delinquency. Previously, he studied in Japan in 1979.

CALL FOR AWARDS NOMINATIONS

The American Society for Public Administration Section on Criminal Justice Administration announces its annual call for nominations of persons who have made outstanding national contributions to the improvement of criminal justice administration. Four areas of contributions are eligible: development of a new theory, new syntheses of existing theories, leadership in implementation of a major improvement, or lifetime continuing professional contribution. The 1988 awards will be based on nominations received by November 15, 1987.

Forms and instructions for submitting nominations can be obtained from: Robert I. Myselsohn, Chairman, ASAP/SCJA Awards Committee, School of Public and Environmental Affairs, Indiana University - Indianapolis, 801 W. Michigan St., Room 4063, Indianapolis, IN 46223.

Deadline for receipt of completed nomination forms is November 15, 1987.

LETTERS

I wanted to let the members of the American Society of Criminology know about an interesting conference on career criminal research that was held at the University of Nebraska at Omaha during April. The conference was organized by the Department of Criminal Justice in an effort to enable their faculty to become better informed about the current issues associated with the topic of career criminals and criminal careers. Professors Alfred Blumstein from Carnegie-Mellon University, Michael Gottfredson from the University of Arizona and Joseph Weis from the University of Washington presented findings from individual research projects, spoke on their unique concerns for criminological work in this area and served as seminar leaders for the conference.

The two-day meeting allowed informal debate on many issues and provided a forum from which rival opinions were aired. I know that my understanding of the issues concerning research on crime has improved appreciably as a result of the opportunity to participate in this conference. I certainly encourage the continuation of small conferences such as this one. I also recommended that ASC consider implementing informal group discussions during the annual meeting as an excellent way for members to become informed about topics of interest. My thanks to the University of Nebraska.

Kimberly L. Kempf, Ph.D.

CALL FOR PAPERS

The American Journal of Police

The American Journal of Police is seeking manuscripts to review for publication. The Journal is interdisciplinary and serves as a forum for scholarly research and writing on all topics related to policing. Contributions may be empirical, theoretical, historical, or provide syntheses of existing literature. Manuscripts which are critical in nature or address neglected issues are of particular interest.

All submissions are reviewed by two referees. Authors are ordinarily notified of the editorial decision within three months of submission. Reviewers' comments are relayed to authors whether the paper is accepted for publication or not.

The following requirements pertain to all submissions:

1. Three copies of the manuscript must be submitted.

CALL FOR ARTICLES

The Editors of the Journal of Contemporary Criminal Justice have issued a call for papers for a special issue of the journal. The deadline for submission is November 1, 1987. The theme of this special issue will be "Beyond Criminology: Criminal Justice Theories and Models." We will focus on all aspects of the relationship between traditional criminology theory and the development of criminal justice theory and research. It will also include works on the theoretical concerns related to understanding the structure, organization, and administrative process or practice of criminal justice.

CALL FOR ARTICLES

The International Review of Victimology invites contributions for consideration on all aspects of victimology. The journal is affiliated with the World Society of Victimology, and its International Editorial Board includes ASC members David Biles, Ezzat Fat- tah, Gilbert Geis, Klaus Sessar, Irvin Waller, Marvin Wolfgang, and Marlene Young, founder of NOVA. The International Review of Victimology will be edited by John Freeman, Faculty of Laws, King's College, London, and Leslie Sebba of the Institute of Criminology, The Hebrew University, Jerusalem.

This new journal will focus upon traditional areas of victimological research, such as offender typologies, the victim-offender relationship, victimization surveys, victim compensation, the victim in the criminal justice system, reparation and restitution by offenders, together with broader theoretical issues such as definitions of victimization and the philosophy of victimology. This in turn will open the door to the consideration of political and human rights issues and contributions with a comparative perspective will be especially welcome.

Manuscripts should be addressed to John Freeman, Faculty of Laws, King's College, Strand, London WC2R 2LS, United Kingdom or to Leslie Sebba, Institute of Criminology, The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, 91905, Israel. Notes for contributors are available from the editors.

nalists, social workers, and historians? If sociologists and criminologists cannot answer that question satisfactorily, the two fields do not deserve survival. I have no difficulty answering: social and behavioral scientists can strive for empirical theories and assess those theories largely in terms of predictive power (testability, predictive accuracy, parsimony, scope, and range, to mention only five of seven dimensions).

Observe that I equate an emphasis on predictive power and positivism, but I use the latter term with reluctance because it is now little more than a derogatory label. In any case, I am under no illusion. Criminologists are not about to adopt predictive power as the criterion for assessing theories. Nor will they have any truck with formal theory construction, the very thing that is needed for systematically testable theories. True, formal theory construction is another of my lost causes, something I knew when writing Sociological Theory Construction; but like any good fanatic I have no regrets. So if my critics cling to the hope that I will change, they should live that long.

Yet I do confess to a fear of being misunderstood. Although I am totally opposed to Marxist regimes, because they make a mockery of human freedom, many of my stances and beliefs are leftist. As examples, I marched against Vietnam, and I advocate a virtually total inheritance tax. The point is made in connection with an argument that has come to have a large following in the social and behavioral sciences over the past 20 years or so. Stating the argument briefly: positivists are necessarily conservatives if not reactionaries. The argument is not just a crock; it is a pernicious crock.

SERIES ON GRADUATE PROGRAMS
Graduate Programs in Criminology
School of Criminology, Florida State University

The Florida State University School of Criminology has the oldest criminology program in the country and offers the B.A., B.S., M.A., M.S. and Ph.D. degrees. The faculty is interdisciplinary and this diversity facilitates a wide-range of educational opportunities for doctoral and master's students. The graduate program emphasizes theory and research; however, courses are offered in virtually every area of criminology and criminal justice.

Admission into the Master's program requires a minimum score of 1000 on the combined verbal and quantitative portions of the Graduate Record Examination or a grade point average of 3.0 or better in the last two undergraduate years. The Master's program has five required courses, but beyond this students can create their own specialized area of study. The Master's degree may be earned by: (a) twenty-four hours of course work and a six hour thesis; (b) twenty-seven hours of course work and a three hour area paper; or (c) thirty-three hours of course work.

Admission into the doctoral program requires a master's degree, including a thesis, area paper, or equivalent research paper. The student's program is individually designed by the student and his or her supervisory committee. There is a minimum University residency requirement of twenty-four hours of course work and twelve dissertation hours. The foreign language requirement can be met by either two language exams or course work in computer programming, data processing, or statistics. A written comprehensive examination completes the course work, after which a prospectus for a dissertation may be submitted. Completion and successful defense of the dissertation culminates in the Doctor of Philosophy in Criminology.

Florida State University is located in Tallahassee, Florida which has a population of 125,000. Two Universities, the state capitol, a new civic center, and the Gulf of Mexico provide numerous educational, governmental, cultural, and recreational opportunities and activities.

GOLDKAMP (continued from page 1) parative and Interdisciplinary Research and Practice.” We believed the fact that the meetings would be held in Montreal provided an exciting opportunity to stimulate international dialogue on important criminological issues shared in common. One example of this emphasis will be a series of international panels held on the second day of the conference having simultaneous translation facilities available courtesy of the Societe de Criminologie du Quebec [indicated by asterisks in the program] and culminated by a special cocktail hour hosted by the Societe and Quebec and Canadian government agencies.

In addition, a special plenary will feature the critical views of three scholars from the United States, Canada and Australia—Professors Joan McCord, Marie Andree Bertrand and John Braithwaite—on the state of criminology today. Our goal was to highlight our general theme of international participation and discussion not only with this plenary, but also in many of the sessions that will be presented. In this context, of special note is the session uniting the heads of government research units of three nations—James Stewart of the National Institute of Justice in the U.S., Mary Tuck of the Research and Planning Unit of Her Majesty's Home Office in the U.K., and Yvon Dandurant of the Research and Statistics Group of the Canadian Department of Justice—who will discuss research funding policies.

In order to respond to questions that have been raised about the role the ASC should take concerning important policy issues of the day, we are experimenting with the introduction of a special session in which three active members of the ASC Policy Committee present proposed policy positions for comment by attendees. Rita Simon will chair this session which will feature presentations by Gary Gottfredson and Kay Harris discussing positions the ASC may wish to endorse on key issues. The recommendations of this committee and the feedback it obtains from members who attend the policy debate will be forwarded for consideration by the Executive Board.

Another key panel features discussion among leading scholars and journalists of delinquency, drugs and the role of the press—to be followed by a special cocktail hour.

Although it is impossible to list each of the special sessions we hope will make the Montreal meetings memorable—we believe there are many—we would finally like to point out that, thanks to the work of members of the Women's Division, particularly Kathleen Daly and current ASC Vice President Edith Flynn, we have been able to develop a large number of panels dealing with issues related to women, crime and justice. Their work has been impressive and has resulted in one of the richest selection of panels we have seen.

Under the heading of "business," we have the following to note. First, we would like to stress that the preliminary program is subject to change. Notice that we have tried to confine a large number of panels to time periods running between Wednesday morning of the conference week to the end of the day on Saturday. This was made difficult because of the amazing response and large number of panels that have been formed.

In addition, we have received a number of very late entries (remember our March 15th deadline) which, though not placed in the preliminary program, we will try to fit into the final version.

Lastly, we would like to report that we have updated arrangements with airlines. Eastern Airlines will be our U.S. carrier and Air Canada has agreed to be our Canadian carrier. Call Eastern at 1-800-468-7022 (in Florida 1-800-282-0244). Members must refer to Eastern's easy access number: EZ11AP13. For Air Canada call 1-800-361-7585 and specify that you are a member of the ASC. With both airlines available to assist, most participants ought to be able to find suitable discounts in making travel plans. Sarah Hall will be glad to provide the details for those wishing to make use of either airline.

With that, we look forward to an exciting meeting in November in one of North America's most beautiful locations.

SERIES ON GRADUATE PROGRAMS

Criminal Justice Program
Florida International University
Miami, Florida

The graduate program in criminal justice at Florida International University offers a variety of full and part time programs of study leading to a Master of Science in Criminal Justice (MSCJ). Administrative or technical specialization may be in the areas of the courts, law enforcement, corrections, law, or planning and research. The primary mission of the Masters Program is (1) to develop criminal justice administrators who will show leadership in assuming responsibility for public policy planning and administration and be capable of addressing innovation in their agencies, (2) to assist graduates to acquire the necessary knowledge, skills and abilities to perform applied research, to develop the ability to discern problem areas, and to manage technical or service-related functions in criminal justice agencies, and (3) to assist students to prepare for advanced graduate study, if desired.

The two part curriculum begins with a basic core that focuses on the fundamentals of criminal justice administration and the development of critical and analytical skills, including statistics and research design. Management theory and state-of-the-art computer technology is emphasized. Eighteen units of elective coursework allows students to develop a desired area of substantive concentration. Students may pursue individualized programs of study that draw on the interdisciplinary resources of the School of Public Affairs and Services and other university departments. The Department of Criminal Justice has a Master's level track into the Public Administration Ph.D. program. Following admittance to the Public Administration program, students can also pursue doctoral studies with substantive concentrations in criminal justice administration.

The School of Public Affairs and Services (SPAS) houses research and training institutes that provide qualified students with site training and research experiences. The university maintains a state-of-the-art DEC VAX computer for use by students and faculty. SPAS also has a separate computer lab for classroom use by students completing research projects.

Florida International University was founded in 1965 and is one of the nine universities within the State University System of Florida, currently enrolling over 16,000 students. The two major campuses are located in Dade County. The Tamiami campus near downtown Miami, and the Bay Vista campus near Miami Beach. Student housing is available, as are waivers of admission requirements and tuition fees for qualified students. Research assistantships and work-study grants are also available.

Information on the programs can be obtained by writing to the Director, Department of Criminal Justice, ACI-281-A, North Miami, FL 33181, (305) 940-5850, or to the Office of Admissions, Florida International University, Bay Vista Campus, North Miami, Florida 33181.

Faculty include Robert S. Clark, Ph.D., J.D. (New York University), whose research interests include firearm legislation and law enforcement; Jose A. Marques, M.S.W., A.C.S.W. (Barry College, Miami), who directs the student internship program; Luis Salas J.D. (Wake Forest University), who is in the final year of a 2.8 million dollar Federally-sponsored program to help improve the courts in five Central American countries; Dale K. Schreiner, D.Crim. (University of California, Berkeley), who is doing research in prison and jail crowding and their relationship to inmate violence; Regina B. Shearn, Ph.D. (Florida State University) whose interests are in women's studies and correctional operations; Robert E. Snow, J.D. (Florida State University), whose interests are in law and administrative procedure; Ray Sorette, Ph.D. (Florida State University) Director, whose research interests are the mass media and crime; W. Clinton Terry III, Ph.D. (University of California, Santa Barbara), whose research interests are in law enforcement behavior and management and private security; and, William Wilbanks, Ph.D. (State University of New York, Albany), whose research interests include minorities in the justice system and homicide.
