Political Ideology and American Criminologists’ Explanations for Criminal Behavior

Anthony Walsh, Boise State University
Lee Ellis, Minot State University

Is criminological theorizing driven by sociopolitical ideology or by the weight of the evidence? Over the years, several writers have expressed concern over the degree to which criminological theorizing seems to have more to do with political philosophies than with any objective research findings (see Sagarin, 1980; Wright & Miller, 1998).

To the extent that opinions regarding the acceptability of criminological theories are ideologically driven, hopes are dim that criminologists will ever come to a consensus about the causes of criminal behavior. Previous studies of criminologists’ opinions regarding theories and crime causation have shown that their views are indeed highly fragmented (Ellis & Hoffman, 1990; Ellis & Walsh, 1999).

The present study was undertaken to determine if much of the fragmentation in criminologist’s explanations for criminal behavior can be attributable to political ideology.

METHODS

Five hundred attendees at the 1997 American Society of Criminology (ASC) conference in San Diego, California were mailed a two-page questionnaire, an explanatory letter, and a stamped addressed envelope for reply. Usable responses were obtained from 147 (29.4%) respondents. Ninety-five of the respondents (64.6%) were male and 50 (34.5%) were female. Nine of the respondents did not provide sufficient information about variables relevant to the present analysis, leaving us with 138 usable questionnaires.

To assess the relationship between political ideology and the theories and explanations that were considered most viable, respondents were asked to self-report their sociopolitical ideology as being either conservative, moderate, liberal, or radical. The percentages placing themselves into these four categories were as follows: conservative (15.6%), moderate (25.9%), liberal (50.3%), and radical (8.2%). To measure which causes of crime were most favored and disfavored, we asked respondents to indicate how important they considered 24 types of causes by assigning a score to each cause ranging from 0 (“of no importance”) to 9 (“extremely important”). These 24 possible causes were subsumed under eight broader categories as shown in an earlier report regarding other aspects of our survey (Ellis & Walsh, 1999:6). The 24 possible causes are shown in Table 2.

FINDINGS

Table 1 shows the 23 different theories identified by the 138 respondents as being what they considered the most viable. Our analysis of these theories according to the respondents’ self-reported political ideology revealed a strong association ($X^2 = 177.23, p < .0001, Cramer’s V = .655$). The main patterns were as follows: Together the two versions of control theory (social and self) were the most favored by conservatives, moderates, and liberals alike. The theories that were most appealing to conservatives were the control theories and routine activities theory. Liberals were more attracted to control theories and to Moffitt’s (1993) recently formulated adolescent-limited/life-course persistent theory. Liberals, the ideological category into which half of our subjects classified themselves, were most drawn to social control theory, differential association theory, and traditional anomic theory.

Those who classified themselves as political radicals all favored conflict theory and Marxian theory. We were not particularly surprised by this, but we were surprised to find all seven of those who subscribed primarily to feminist theory classified themselves politically liberal, rather than radical.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY

Annual Meeting 2000

CALL FOR PAPERS

San Francisco, California
November 15-18
Westin St. Francis Hotel
Grand Hyatt San Francisco Hotel

THEME: CRIME AND CRIMINOLOGY IN THE YEAR 2000

The 2000 Annual Meeting of the American Society of Criminology will be held at the Westin St. Francis and the Grand Hyatt San Francisco Hotels from Wednesday, November 15 through Saturday, November 18.

The 2000 Program consists of six AREAS: 1) Theories and Perspectives, 2) Research Methods, 3) Criminality and Deviance, 4) Law Making, Policy and the Public, 5) The Criminal Justice System-Agencies of Control and Criminal Process and 6) Characteristics of Victims and Offenders. Each AREA includes specific DIVISIONS within which we invite the submission of panels and papers.

Submission should be made to the CHAIR of the DIVISION you think most appropriate (DO NOT SUBMIT THE SAME PANEL OR THE SAME PAPER TO MORE THAN ONE DIVISION CHAIR). It is essential that EACH AUTHOR'S name, mailing address, telephone number, FAX number, and E-mail address must be provided on panel submission forms, abstract forms, and abstracts. We will apply the new “two appearance” rule: ONLY ONE FIRST AUTHOR PRESENTATION and one other appearance as chair or discussant; unlimited appearances as co-author. Please limit your submissions and acceptance of invitations to participate to no more than two separate panels. Address questions about submission to the appropriate AREA CHAIR or Deborah Baskin or Ira Sommers, Program Co-Chairs.

In addition to Paper and Panel submissions, we invite suggestions for round-table and special sessions.

ASC members willing to serve as session chairs or discussants should notify an appropriate Division Chair. Your willingness to serve is greatly appreciated, but it does not guarantee your program participation.

The FIRM DEADLINE for submission is March 31, 2000. LATE SUBMISSIONS should be submitted to Deborah Baskin. They will not be considered for panel sessions. Late submissions will be organized into "Table Sessions" in which groups of scholars present their papers to each other (and others who want to join the table). No submissions will be accepted after June 5, 2000.

SUBMISSION DETAILS

- Submissions must be received by March 31, 2000
- Please send your submission to just one DIVISION Chair. If the Chair decides another Division is more appropriate for your submission, your forms will be forwarded to the Chair of that Division: you will be notified of this change.
- Each participant is limited one first author presentation and one other appearance as a chair or discussant.
- We suggest that a panel include not more than five paper presentations or four papers and a discussant.
- All paper or panel submissions must include an abstract. In submitting your abstract, please limit it to 200 words. The abstract should only briefly note the purpose, method, and the results of the study, or the general theme of the paper.
- Please note that the Meeting is in NOVEMBER. Program participants are expected to pre-register for the meetings. Pre-registration materials will be sent to you by September of 2000. Failure to pre-register may result in the removal of a paper from the program.
- The meetings are Wednesday through Saturday. Participants should expect to be in attendance the entire time as we cannot guarantee any particular day and time for panel presentations.
- Please remember to submit only papers that are original and have not been published or presented elsewhere.

The 2000 Meeting will include panel sessions, table sessions, "author meets critic" sessions, thematic sessions, and plenary sessions. We welcome suggestions for any of the above as we strive to organize a program that cuts across criminology disciplines, professions and approaches.

We look forward to seeing you in San Francisco.

ANNOUNCEMENT
UCLA Drug Abuse Research Center
M. Douglas Anglin, Ph.D., Director

Predoctoral and Postdoctoral Fellowships

Sponsored by
National Institute on Drug Abuse
National Research Service Award Training Grant

Aim
Under the supervision of Center research staff, this two year training fellowship will provide selected participants with firm grounding in drug abuse knowledge and issues, in sound research techniques and in practical research experience. The program is designed to provide trainees both with exposure to a variety of drug abuse settings, personnel, topics, and methods, and with the opportunity to select a specific area of focus for independent research at one of the participant research sites. Training curricula of formal coursework and supervised research. The program will provide research opportunities in epidemiology, etiology, treatment processes and outcomes, pharmacotherapy, and social policy issues.

Eligibility
Predoctoral candidates - UCLA only, with completion of required formal coursework in a social science (psychology, sociology, anthropology, education, social work, public health, or nursing), a GPA of 3.0 or better. University tuition and fees are paid.

Postdoctoral candidates - Completion of the M.D. degree or Ph.D. degree in a social science (see areas listed above), education, social work, or health-related science such as public health or nursing from an accredited university.

U.S. citizens and permanent residents only.

Application Procedure
Submit a letter of application to include an outline of research experience, interest, desire for a career in drug abuse research, specific area of research and a focused research problem within that area current curriculum vitae including a list of pertinent publications; university transcripts; and letters of recommendation from the applicant's major advisor or supervisor and two others familiar with the applicant's scholastic and research background potential. After review of written material, the most qualified applicants will be interviewed.

Stipends
Predoctoral fellows receive an annual stipend of $14,688. Postdoctoral fellows receive an annual stipend based on years of postdoctoral experience. Health insurance and predoctoral tuition provided.

What's Wrong with the Criminal Justice System: Ideology, Politics and the Media
Alida V. Merlo & Peter J. Benkos

This book reviews concepts, information and points of view that help to explain the context and constraints of the criminal justice system. It engages the reader in a dialogue regarding what's wrong with the criminal justice system and what can be done to make it "less wrong." The critique of the system is organized into six chapters that summarize recent developments in public policy and crime control and interweave three themes central to the discussion: the impact of ideology, the role of the media, and the politicization of crime and criminal justice.

1. Dynamics of Criminal Justice
2. Police: Maintaining a Delicate Balance
3. The Court Conundrum: Confronting the Consequences of Policy
4. Punishment and Prisons: Correctional Policy in Crisis
5. Juvenile Justice: Deconstructing Adolescence and Dismantling the Juvenile Court
6. Changing Course

Criminal Women
Joycelyn M. Pollock

Criminal Women provides thorough examination of female crime patterns based on broad, consistent and longstanding findings regarding women's crime rates. A critical approach is used to explore which criminological theories best explain female criminality, including the earliest and the most recent theories, and the classic as well as the controversial. This brand new title revisits the standard criminological theories, but does so with a focus upon how well they explain the gender differences in criminal behavior.

Introduction: Framing the Questions • Crimes Committed by Women: Violent and Property Crime • Crimes Committed by Women: Drugs and Delinquency • An Increase or Decrease in Chivalry? • Traditional Criminology Equals the Study of Criminal Man • The Criminology of Women, Feminist Criminology, and the "New" Female Criminal • Current Theories: Here We Go Again? • Biological and Social Explanations of Crime • Sex Differences and Moral Development: Toward an Integrated Understanding of Crime and Crime Prevention

Quality criminal justice textbooks for more than 30 years
Turning from theories to fairly specific types of causes of criminal behavior, Table 2 presents mean responses for each of the four ideological categories according to the 24 types of causes of criminal behavior. To roughly separate “important causes” from those that were considered to be of lesser importance, we divided the findings into causes that received average ratings above and below 5.

Regarding important causes of crime, significant differences in ratings were found for five different causal factors. The nature of the differences were as follows: Radicals are most likely to consider “unfair economic system,” and “lack of educational opportunities” important. Conservatives gave their highest ratings to “lack of supervision,” “poor discipline practices,” and “unstable family life.” In most cases, the average ratings of these five factors by moderates and liberals were roughly intermediate between those of conservatives and radicals for the same factors.

Interestingly, no significant disagreements were found among conservatives, moderates, liberals, or radicals regarding the importance of “lack of empathy,” “peer influences,” “impulsiveness,” “alcohol abuse,” and “drug abuse” as causes of serious and persistent offending. Criminologists of all political persuasions seem to consider these factors fairly important causes of criminal behavior.

Moving to the causes of criminal behavior that received average ratings below 5, Table 2 shows that there are six causes that were a source of substantial disagreement. Three of these causes were considered significantly more important by radicals than by conservatives. These were “bias in law enforcement,” “labeling factors,” and “creating unrealistic goals by the mass media.” Conservatives, on the other hand, rated the following three factors as significantly more important than did radicals: “lack of religious/moral training,” “media violence,” and “neurological factors.” As in regard to causes that received average ratings above 5, one can see that moderates and liberals tend to exhibit ratings for these six less important perceived causes of crime in between the ratings given by conservatives and radicals.

DISCUSSION

Our findings confirm what many have suspected: Criminology is highly fragmented, and much of the fragmentation is linked to political ideology. The general patterns in disagreement are also fairly predictable based on common knowledge of people’s political ideologies. Conservative criminologists were most likely to attribute criminal behavior to family problems involving stability and the use of firm discipline, whereas radicals conceive of crime causation more in terms of societal inequality. With only minor exceptions, moderates and liberals appear to fall in between conservatives and radicals in their ratings of the importance of various causal factors.

In the case of criminological theories, only radicals appear to have a total aversion to both social control theory and self-control theory, the two most popular criminological theories at the present time. Only minor differences between conservatives, moderates, and liberals were discerned with regard to the popularity of most theories.

Two limitations of this study need to be acknowledged. First, the response rate was disappointingly low, with only about a quarter of those invited to respond actually doing so. There is no way of knowing how representative of American criminologists the respondents to this survey were without repeating the survey in the future and obtaining a much larger proportion of respondents.

A second limitation of the present study is that it does not address the causal direction of the relationships that were found to be statistically significant. One could reason that once criminologists become convinced of what the main causes of crime are, they shift their political ideologies accordingly. On the other hand, it could be that political ideologies form first, and then shape how criminologists explain criminal behavior and the kind of evidence they are likely to accept. Some type of reciprocal combination of these two causal scenarios could also be involved.

Ideally, there should be no significant relationships between political ideology and judgments that criminologists make about the causes of crime. Therefore, to assess the degree to which criminology is becoming an objective discipline, one may be able to conduct surveys similar to this one ever decade or so to see if any reductions in the relationship between ideology and causal explanations take place.

Whatever may be the causes for what we found, our study suggests that political perspectives are currently a significant component in criminological theorizing. The strength of several of the relationships disclosed in this survey were substantial, leading one to wonder if criminologists’ explanations of criminal behavior change at all in the face of new research discoveries. We conclude that, at the very least, criminologists are unlikely to come together under a single scientific paradigm any time soon.

ACA Unveils Introductory Law Textbook

From Law to Order: The Theory and Practice of Law and Justice
Anthony Walsh, Ph.D. & Craig Hemmens, J.D., Ph.D.

In many cases, the most difficult part of teaching an entry level law course is selecting a textbook which will cover the necessary information, yet not become boring or overwhelming to the student. At last this textbook exists. Students will gain a new appreciation of the law and the concepts involved. From Law to Order examines:

- What is Law?
- Making Law
- Criminal Law
- Civil Law and Juvenile Justice
- Federal and State Courts
- Women and the Law

Discussion questions and vocabulary follow each chapter. An instructor’s manual with test questions is also available. (1999, approx. 395 pages, 1-56991-117-7)

Listen to what one of your colleagues has to say about From Law to Order...

"The authors review what law and justice is, where it comes from, how it has been conceived in the past, and how the current legal system affects social change. Social scientists, the public, and legal scholars will find all of the chapters provocative, authoritative, and intelligently crafted. I will highly recommend it to both my undergraduate and graduate students."

The National Archive of Criminal Justice Data (NACJD) at ICPSR invites applications for a Visiting Scholar for the year 2000. The Visiting Scholar would define a program of research in consultation with the U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics, conduct that research using data archived at the NACJD, work collaboratively with the NACJD staff on archival development issues, participate in the BJS summer program on Quantitative Analysis of Crime and Criminal Justice, and present and publish the results.

ICPSR offers the quantitative scholar of crime and criminal justice a highly invigorating and supportive environment. The data are available at ICPSR without having to download large data sets. The scholar will work with NACJD staff who know the data sets in great detail. There is the potential to merge or analyze multiple data sets including those in the main ICPSR archive. ICPSR will provide computing resources, remote access from the scholar’s home institution to the data, private office space and clerical and administrative support. The scholar will also have access to library and other resources of the University of Michigan. The University of Michigan is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. This appointment is intended for faculty or senior researchers who have a demonstrated or promising track record of research using quantitative data on crime and criminal justice. The focus of the proposed research should be on studies that advance the use of BJS data. BJS will be actively involved in the selection of the scholar and in advising the scholar about the nature and relevance of the proposed research to the mission of BJS.

The position is structured on a nonresident basis. The Visiting Scholar would work at ICPSR 3-4 days a month throughout the academic year and would be in residence throughout the summer program period. Partial salary support is available and all trips to, and per diem expenses at, ICPSR and BJS would be paid as part of the appointment. The 12 month appointment could begin as early as January 2000 but no later than June 2000.

Phone or e-mail inquiries are welcome and encouraged. Applicants should send a letter describing their proposed research interests for the visiting period, the data that they would plan to use, and their relevant background. They should also describe collaborative activities that they would undertake with the NACJD to advance its archival development and dissemination missions. They should also include a curriculum vitae and the names and contact information for three references. Applications should be sent to the address below. Applications should be received by December 1, 1999 to assure full consideration. Materials can also be sent as electronic attachments to e-mail directed to: csdunn@umich.edu

THE ASC E-MAIL MENTORING PROGRAM

Students: The American Society of Criminology developed the E-Mail Mentoring Program in 1993, the purpose being to link ASC undergraduate and graduate students with experts in the field of Criminology.

Through this program, students can email openly and candidly with non-students (faculty, researchers, practitioners, administrators) outside of their universities. Students can ask mentors about career choices, research and theoretical issues, personal-professional concerns (such as what it is like to be a minority Criminologist in a variety of work settings).

At this point we have over 60 mentors, representing a wide array of specializations, races/ethnicities, nationalities, professional experiences, and workplace settings.

It's Free and it works!

The way it works is very simple... The address for free and expert mentoring is:

http://ascmentor.anomie.com

(This site is also mirrored at http://sun.soci.niu.edu/~ascmentr)

As soon as you find a mentor with whom you wish to commune, click on her/his e-mail address and you're hotlinked right away with that mentor. There is no limitation on how many mentors you can use.

New Mentors: The ASC e-mail mentoring program has been a rewarding experience for those of us already serving as mentors. As you know, we always learn from our students. The necessary qualifications are: membership in the ASC and status of non-student. We seek not only university faculty but also mentors working in research institutes (private or public), practitioners, administrators, or any field related to the discipline of Criminology.

Just send me the following information:

Name
Office or other mailing address
E-mail address
Areas of specialization within Criminology (e.g., gender and crime, community corrections, qualitative methodology, technology, theory, etc.)
Age (optional)
Gender
Race/ethnicity

Old Mentors: For those of you already signed up as mentors, if you need any changes to your information (place of work, areas of specialization, etc.), it is a simple matter of e-mailing me with your changes. I'll revise your listing within a couple of days. No muss, no fuss.
!!! Mentor of the Year Award !!!

Students nominate an individual mentor who has been especially helpful. As webmaster, I read the recommendations, tally the votes, and give a very nice plaque to the lucky mentor. The mentor of the year award is announced at the ASC annual meetings. Students, please make your nominations by September 1 of every year.

UNC Charlotte is an EEO/AA employer.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH FLORIDA. Criminal Justice Faculty Openings. The Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice (SACJ) invites applications for two faculty positions in Criminal Justice beginning August 2000. One position will be filled at the Assistant Professor level and the other at the Associate or Assistant Professor Level.

Criminal Justice Position A (31832): The successful candidate should have an earned doctorate in Criminology, Criminal Justice, Sociology or other closely related social science discipline by July 2000. Candidates holding the JD who possess exceptional experiential and research qualifications may also be considered. The candidate must be able to teach undergraduate and graduate courses in policing and law enforcement and/or courts and law, with priority given to applicants who can teach both.

Criminal Justice Position B (31882): The successful candidate should have an earned doctorate in Criminology, Criminal Justice, Sociology or closely related social science discipline by July 2000. The candidate must be able to teach undergraduate and graduate courses in criminological theory, deviance processes, introductory criminology and criminal justice systems courses. Successful candidates will have active research agendas, as well as demonstrated or high potential for excellence in teaching. Preference in both positions will be given to applicants who have the ability to teach graduate and undergraduate courses in quantitative and qualitative research methods. Please send a curriculum vita; a photocopy of your transcript showing the highest earned degree; a letter describing your interests and experience in the areas of teaching, research and service; and three current letters of recommendation. Also include sample course syllabi and recent teaching evaluations. Send all materials to: Chair, Criminal Justice Search Committee, Department of SACJ, University of North Florida, Jacksonville, FL 32224. Applications must be postmarked by December 1, 1999. The University of North Florida is an equal opportunity/equal access/affirmative action institution.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH FLORIDA. The Department of Sociology, Anthropology and Criminal Justice wishes to announce the position of Department Chair has been reopened. We seek a scholar with strong leadership skills and vision to oversee a diverse and growing department. The Department currently offers an MS in Criminal Justice, BA degrees in Sociology and Criminal Justice, and minors in Anthropology and Social Welfare. In addition, we are in the process of developing an applied graduate program in Sociology and a BA in Anthropology. The Department has 19 faculty and anticipates additional lines in the future. We have over 350 combined undergraduate majors and over 30 master's level students. The Department has established an applied research center that has successfully attracted external grants which support faculty research and involve graduate and undergraduate students. Candidates whose specialty is in Sociology, Criminology, or Anthropology will be considered. Experience or familiarity with the organization, dynamics, and issues facing multidisciplinary departments is essential, and the individual should be comfortable working within a shared governance system. Candidates must have an established research agenda, including experience in external funding. In addition, candidates must possess a strong record of scholarly productivity and have a strong commitment to an environment that fosters excellence in teaching and the development of faculty research. Candidates must have an earned Ph.D., and should be eligible for the rank of Full Professor, although advanced Associate Professors with appropriate administrative experience will be considered. Applicants must send a letter of application, vita, and names and addresses of five (5) references to Jeffry A. Will, Chair, Search Committee, Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Criminal Justice, University of North Florida, 4567 St. Johns Bluff Road, South, Jacksonville, FL 32224. Applications must be postmarked no later than November 15, 1999. The University of North Florida in Jacksonville is one of the 10 publicly funded institutions of higher learning in Florida. UNF is an equal opportunity/equal access/affirmative action institution.

ASC STUDENTS
CALL FOR ENTRIES

2000 ASC GENE CARTE STUDENT PAPER COMPETITION

We invite participation in The American Society of Criminology Gene Carte Student Paper Competition. These awards are given to recognize outstanding scholarly work of students. Following are the procedures for the 2000 competition.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE

Any student currently enrolled on a full-time basis in an academic program at either the undergraduate or graduate level. Persons who are previous first place prize winners of this competition are ineligible.

SPECIFICATIONS FOR PAPERS

No paper may be submitted to more than one ASC student competition for the same year. Any paper that has previously won any prize in any ASC competition is ineligible for submission to another ASC competition. Papers may be conceptual and/or empirical but must be directly related to criminology. Papers must be typewritten, double-spaced on 8-1/2 x 11 white paper, and no longer than 7,500 words. The CRIMINOLOGY format for the organization of text, citations and references should be used. Authors' names, departments and advisors (optional) must appear ONLY on the title page, since papers will be evaluated anonymously. The next page of the manuscript should include the title and a 100-word abstract. The author must submit EIGHT copies of the manuscript, accompanied by a letter indicating the author's enrollment status and co-signed by the dean, department chair or program director.

DEADLINE

Papers must be submitted with a postmark on or before April 15, 2000 to:

STEVEN P. LAB
Criminal Justice Program
Bowling Green State University
Bowling Green, OH 43403
419/372-7778 419/372-2897 FAX
slab@bgnet.bgsu.edu

PROCEDURES FOR JUDGING ENTRIES

The Student Awards Committee will rate entries according to criteria such as the quality of the conceptualization, significance of the topic, clarity and aptness of methods, quality of the writing, command of relevant work in the field, and contribution to criminology. The Committee's award determinations will be final.

AWARDS

The 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place papers will be awarded prizes of $500, $300, and $200, respectively and will be eligible for presentation at the 2000 meeting of The American Society of Criminology in San Francisco, California, November 15-18, 2000. The 1st prize winner also will be granted a travel award to the meeting. The Committee may decide that no entry is of sufficient quality to declare a winner. Fewer than three awards may be given. Prize-winning students will be acknowledged at the Annual Meeting Awards Ceremony.

NOTIFICATION OF AWARDS

The author(s) of entries selected by the judges for awards will be notified in writing by August 1, 2000.
NOMINATIONS FOR ASC FELLOWS

The ASC Fellows Committee invites nominations for Fellows in the Society. This title is available to those members of the Society in good standing who have achieved distinction in criminology. The last meeting of the ASC Executive Board approved the following clarification of this distinction: "The honorary title "Fellow" recognizes persons who have made a scholarly contribution to the intellectual life of the discipline, whether in the form of a singular, major piece of scholarship or cumulative scholarly contributions. Longevity alone is not sufficient. In addition, a Fellow must have made a significant contribution to the field through the career development of other criminologists and/or through organizational activities within the ASC."

The names of those who have been awarded the Fellow status will be announced at the 2000 Annual Meeting and the candidates will be acknowledged by the Society with the presentation of a Certificate.

In your nominating letter, please describe the reasons for your nomination and include a copy of the nominees' curriculum vitae (or make arrangements to have it sent to the Committee). All materials should be received by March 1, 2000 to:

THE CONTEMPORARY JUSTICE REVIEW
CALL FOR PAPERS

Guest editors of a special issue of the CONTEMPORARY JUSTICE REVIEW, Gale Burford and Joe Hudson, are pleased to announce a call for papers on "The Restorative Justice Program as a Demonstration Project."

The editors are looking for papers that describe the operations of restorative justice programs (e.g. peacemaking circles, victim-offender mediation, family group conferencing, and victim-offender reconciliation programs), that illustrate how such projects embody restorative justice principles, and that show how such programs have implications for adoption elsewhere.

Papers accepted for publication will be expected to address the following:
(1) the restorative nature of the program and how it differs from a punitive or treatment response to harm;
(2) the eligible population of persons accepted for the program and the basis on which eligibility decisions are made;
(3) a description of the way the needs of all persons associated with the program are served, those responsible for the harm done, those who have been harmed, and the significant others of each;
(4) the key staff involved in the process, their roles, responsibilities and the nature of their participation in the restorative process from admission to discharge;
(5) the key implementation problems experienced by the program; and
(6) how the program demonstrates a potential for implementation elsewhere.

RUTH SHONLE CAVAN YOUNG SCHOLAR AWARD

Sponsored by Wadsworth Publishing Co.

This Award will be given to recognize outstanding scholarly contributions to the discipline of criminology by someone who has received the Ph.D., MD, LLD, or a similar graduate degree no more than five years before the selection for the award (for this year the degree must have been awarded no earlier than May of 1994). The Award may be for a single work or a series of contributions, and may include coauthored works.

Those interested in being considered for the award or nominating someone for the Award should send copies of applicant's/nominee's vitae and published works to:

FRANK R. SCARPITTI
Sociology and Criminal Justice
University of Delaware
Newark, DE 19716
302/831-2495
302/831-2607 FAX
frs@udel.edu

Seven copies of all materials submitted in support of a nomination must be received by March 1, 2000.

The person selected for the Award will receive a plaque commemorating the Award, one thousand dollars, and up to five hundred dollars towards expenses associated with attending the 2000 ASC meeting.
NOMINATIONS FOR 2000

MICHAEL J. HINDELANG AWARD

For the Most Outstanding Contribution to Criminology

The American Society of Criminology has established the Michael J. Hindelang Award, to be given annually for a book published during the previous two to three years that makes the most outstanding contribution to research in criminology.

To be considered, a book must be nominated by an individual, as opposed to a corporate, member of the ASC. The Committee will not consider anthologies and/or edited volumes. The Award will be presented during the annual meeting of the Society. The Executive Board may decide not to give the Award in a given year.

The Award Committee is soliciting nominations for the Michael J. Hindelang Award. To nominate a book, please send the title of the book, its authors, the publisher, the year of the publication, and a brief discussion of your reasons for the recommendation to the Award Committee.

The deadline for receiving nominations is February 15, 2000. Send your nomination to:

ASC PANELS AT MILLENNIAL AAAS MEETINGS

Jeffrey Fagan, ASC AAAS Representative

In February, ASC will sponsor two panels at the 2000 Annual Meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, or AAAS. Since 1991, ASC has been a member organization of the Social and Economic Sciences Section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Membership status entitles us to sponsor panels for the AAAS annual meeting. Each year, ASC proposes one or more panels for the AAAS annual meeting. In the past, ASC panels at AAAS have addressed a broad range of topics in criminology and law, including interpersonal violence, DNA testing, labor market influences.

This year's panels address two timely topics that span criminology and law. Jeffrey Fagan and Franklin Zimring have organized a panel titled "Separating the Men from the Boys: The Changing Borders of Criminal Punishment of Adolescent Offenders." The papers collectively offer a legal and theoretical framework for both substantive and procedural law to set boundaries for the modern juvenile court. Papers will address age-graded sanction effects developmental thresholds for competency and culpability, and jurisprudential concerns in setting the threshold for adult punishment of adolescent offenders. Alfred Blumstein has organized a panel titled "The Changing Interaction of Violent Crime and Punishment in the United States," examining the factors contributing to the rise and fall of violent crime since the mid-1980s, with special focus on the effects of steadily growing incarceration rates to the current decline in violent crime. The panel also will explore reasons for the continued growth in incarceration during the current crime decline.

The panel topics and organizers each year are developed by the ASC delegate to AAAS. Jeffrey Fagan has been the delegate since 1995, and his appointment expires with the 2000 AAAS meeting. This year, the Board will appoint a new delegate to AAAS to serve a three-year term.

CALL FOR PAPERS
Second Annual Conference
JUSTICE STUDIES ASSOCIATION (JSA)
May 31-June 2, 2000

The Justice Studies Association is pleased to announce a call for papers for its second annual conference scheduled for Wednesday, May 31 to Friday, June 2, 2000. The conference will be held at the Ramada Inn, 1228 Western Avenue, Albany, New York. The theme of this year's conference is Confronting Processes and Institutions of Power: Where Restorative Justice and Social Justice Meet. Participants might make presentations on any aspect of restorative justice programs and processes that demonstrate how restorative justice offers an alternative to punishment and other forms of the exercise of power. The papers might focus on how restorative justice is integrally connected with social justice when restorative principles and processes are extended to communities. Presenters might also focus on such issues as the requirements of just community; neighborhood justice; justice without the state; needs-based criminology; the peaceful resolution of conflicts in families and schools; alternative forms and practices of family, school, workplace, and community; and indigenous practices of justice. Papers might take a theoretical approach with a focus on the relationship between power and social/restorative justice or demonstrate the application of restorative justice principles in different formats and venues. Seeds for the Justice Studies Association were sown during the groundbreaking 1997 Albany conference Justice Without Violence: Views From Peacemaking Criminology and Restorative Justice. David Gil of Brandeis University was the keynote speaker at this conference and James Zion, Solicitor of the Navajo Nation Court, and Scott Schaeffer-Duffy of the Worcester Catholic Worker were keynote speakers at the 1999 conference. The association is comprised of scholars, activists, and practitioners who seek in their writing, research, and everyday life to explore the kinds of processes and programs that promote justice without violence and restore people to wholeness through interpersonal as well as structural change. The annual conference is a forum for members, friends, and associates to come together to share their latest work and to discuss issues related to justice at every level. Presentations are brief so as to maximize opportunities for discussion and free exchange among participants. Sessions rarely compete with each other so that all present are able to gain a strong sense of the entire conference. Those wishing to receive more information about membership in JSA or about participation in this year's conference should contact: Justice Studies Association, c/o Dennis Sullivan, Institute for Economic and Restorative Justice, P. O. Box 262, Voorheesville, New York 12186 (518) 765-2468; e-mail: gezelling@global2000.net Those wishing to make a presentation at the conference should send an abstract of 200 words or fewer by February 1, 2000 to Dennis Sullivan at one of the addresses above. Please include with the abstract your e-mail address and other relevant contact information.
CALL FOR PAPERS

National Juvenile Detention Association
Journal for Juvenile Justice and Detention Services

The Journal for Juvenile Justice and Detention Services is soliciting original practice and policy oriented papers from those who work in the field of juvenile justice and/or with juvenile offenders and from college and university faculty.

The Journal for Juvenile Justice and Detention Services is a peer-reviewed policy and practice-oriented journal intended to disseminate timely information to juvenile justice practitioners and researchers regarding effective juvenile justice practices. In addition to publishing articles that are peer-reviewed, the journal also publishes timely commentaries, commissioned articles, and other invited articles that are felt to be relevant to juvenile justice practice.

The editorial scope includes topics relating to juvenile justice, including effective strategies; the operation of juvenile facilities such as detention, shelter facilities, group homes and other community based and institutional placements for youth; programming (e.g., educational, physical and mental health, life skills); trends in juvenile justice; legal issues affecting juvenile justice practice; ethical issues in juvenile treatment; and leadership and training in juvenile justice.

Papers should be typed, double-spaced, and not exceed twenty pages in length. Citations and references should follow APA format. Title and author's name should by typed on a separate page. Four copies of the manuscript should be submitted, accompanied by an abstract of no more than 100 words, and a brief biographical sketch of the author(s), including affiliation, research interests, and recent publications to:

Preston Elrod, Ph.D.

NORTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY. The College of Criminal Justice seeks to hire assistant/associate professors beginning Fall 2000. We are interested in candidates with a broad grasp of the field of criminal justice/criminology. Responsibilities include teaching undergraduate and graduate courses, research, student advising, and service. Candidates should have a doctorate in criminal justice or related field, and have demonstrated high quality teaching and research. The College of Criminal Justice maintains a bachelor's degree program with over 1,000 students, and a master's degree program with 75 students. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply. Northeastern University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Title IX employer. Please send letter of application, curriculum vitae, and the names and phone numbers of three references to Dean Jack R. Greene, Northeastern University, College of Criminal Justice, 360 Huntington Avenue, Boston, MA 02115. The search will continue until the position is filled.

ELMER V.H. AND EILEEN M. BROOKS CHAIR

The College of Criminal Justice at Northeastern University is proud to announce the establishment of the Elmer V. H. and Eileen M. Brooks Chair, endowed by alumnus Robert A. and Joanne Brooks in honor of his parents and their lifetime contributions to the Boston Police Department.

The College also announces its search to hire the first recipient of this newly established chair for Fall 2000. The successful candidate should have a distinguished career in the fields of policing and criminal justice as a recognized scholar with substantial applied research experience. We are especially interested in an individual with a strong national reputation in both academic and applied circles. Candidates should hold a terminal degree in criminal justice or related discipline and have a record of research, teaching, and scholarship sufficient for tenure at the rank of full professor. As a student-centered institution, we are particularly interested in candidates who can teach and work closely with the undergraduate and graduate students, helping them to realize their professional goals.

The Brooks Chair provides a highly competitive salary, a full-range of benefits, and a discretionary budget to support research. Women and minorities are especially encouraged to apply. Nominations and letters of interest may be sent to Dean Jack R. Greene, College of Criminal Justice, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115. The search will continue until the position has been filled.
