WHY CRIMINOLOGISTS SHOULD STUDY TERRORISM

Richard Rosenfeld
University of Missouri-St. Louis

The idea that “everything has changed” since September 11, 2001, is a popular cliché. In reality, everything remains very much the same, including criminology. However inaccurate, the cliché serves an important intellectual function by requiring criminologists to defend the status quo. If “everything” is different, how do we explain the sameness of criminology? Why haven’t we embraced the study of terrorism? Terrorism is a form of interpersonal violence, we study interpersonal violence, so even in the absence of the events of September 11, the burden must be on those who would reject terrorism as an appropriate, if not necessary, subject for criminological theory and research.

Most criminologists and other students of interpersonal violence do not believe terrorism has much in common with street crime, youthful aggression, drug markets, domestic abuse, or the other subjects we feel comfortable addressing. Admittedly, there does seem to be an emerging acknowledgement that criminologists should study terrorism, if only because nearly everybody else thinks we ought to have something to say about the topic. Whether this grudging acceptance of terrorism in the field has anything to do with the vast shift in federal funding priorities over the past year is, as we say, an empirical question. But we should welcome the study of terrorism for intellectual and not just practical or political reasons. Studying terrorism will enrich our explanations of the topics we prefer to study, and we have contributions to make that come from no other scholarly community.

A decent case for the criminological study of terrorism can be built on the reasons we typically use for casting terrorism beyond the pale of our standard explanations, data, and modes of inquiry. Here I confine my attention to studying the etiology of terrorist violence. The case for investigating other relevant topics, such as the social response to terrorism, also can and should be developed.

The Intellectual Objections to Studying Terrorism

1. Terrorism is qualitatively different from the forms of violence we study. We study “common” violence. Terrorism is the opposite.

   Really? Until very recently, “terrorism” per se was not a crime. Even now, terrorists generally are arrested and tried on murder, assault, and weapons charges, not to mention mail fraud, theft, illegal financial transactions, immigration violations, and other “common” crimes. We do study criminal violence and other crimes, so why not terrorism?

   Perhaps the idea is that terrorism is “uncommon” in the sense of being an exceedingly rare phenomenon and therefore not open to our favored modes of empirical investigation. However, homicide is rare, stranger homicide rarer still, and we have an entire journal devoted to studying homicide and its subtypes. Besides, acts of terrorism are not inherently infrequent. They vary over time and space like other violent acts. In principle, explaining the variation in terrorist violence is no different than explaining the variation in terrorist violence is no different than explaining the variation in any other sort of violence. The only difference is in the variables on the right-hand side. And until we have a testable theory of terrorism, we won’t know how different those explanatory variables are. We don’t know that our standard theories are incapable of explaining terrorism. Does specifying the frequency of terrorist violence (or support for terrorism) as a function of resource deprivation (strain), population instability (disorganization), cultural heterogeneity (culture conflict, disorganization), and “preparedness” (deterrence) strike you as a wildly implausible place to begin quantitative criminological research on terrorism? Me neither.

In any case, terrorism is not inherently rare. During the past year, do you think there have been more terrorist killings or more domestic killings, or any other kind of “criminal” homicide, in the state of Israel?

2. Terrorism does not fit our theories of violence.

I have already suggested that many of our theories may offer productive departure points for studying terrorism, but clearly terrorism does not fit easily in some of our theories. Developmental or life-course perspectives? Social control theories? Self-control theories? Yet if terrorism does not fit some theory, why blame terrorism, why not blame the theory? At the very least, contemplating terrorism as a form of violence helps to more clearly demarcate the scope conditions of our explanatory perspectives and to make us more self-conscious about exactly what it is we do study. Terrorism also forces us to confront the possibility that we have constructed theories to explain only those forms of violence that they do explain, an instance of over-fitting we might not otherwise have acknowledged or recognized. And with respect to life-course perspectives, all I can say is that any theory of aggression that emphasizes youthful hostility to authority, and does not apply to terrorism, has some explaining to do.

3. But terrorism is political violence, and our theories are intended to explain non-political violence.

Really? Conventional wisdom in criminology has it that terrorist violence, as political violence, is an intrinsically distinct phenomenon from non-political, criminal violence. What makes political violence different from non-political violence? Certainly not its collective properties, because we seem to have no trouble encompassing gang violence within our theories. Rather, it is the goal-directed character of terrorist violence that ostensibly separates it from so-called criminal violence.

But it is simply false to assume that non-political violence is not directed to the achievement of goals. All violence, as Richard Felson has pointed out, is directed toward one of two general goals: extracting something of value from someone or achieving justice by punishing wrongdoing. The first type we typically refer to as “predatory” violence, because the violent act is unprovoked. The victim of a robbery does not generally “provoke” his or her offender to attack. However, most violence, legitimate or criminal (including some robberies), is provoked by the victim, at least in the eyes of the offender. The intimate abuser provokes his victim to attack him. The abuser’s violence is provoked by his partner’s unwillingness to fulfill his every need. Bar-room brawlers are provoked by other bar-room brawlers. Gang members are provoked by other gang members. The state is provoked by the capital offender into executing him. In each instance, the violence is directed at punishing wrongdoing.

Is there any room for terrorism in this theoretical scenario? Of course there is. Terrorism is intended to punish, deter, or reform evil-doers. In that sense, it is no more or less goal- or justice-oriented than intimate-partner homicide or gang delinquency.

It might be objected that terrorism is, somehow, more “rational” than so-called senseless common violence. Nonsense. How much sense did it make for Timothy McVeigh to blow up the federal building in Oklahoma City? How rational was it to fly airplanes into the World Trade Center to promote world-wide Jihad? And if you are thinking that terrorist violence is less “impulsive” than non-terrorist violence, my thought is “so”? And your point is?

Studying Terrorism Will Enrich Criminology

There is something special about terrorist violence, but that distinctiveness, and what it teaches us about violence more generally, can be appreciated fully only by dealing with terrorism within the theoretical frameworks we use to study other forms of violence. Terrorism is justice-oriented violence—a form of “self help”—with a decidedly predatory character. Terrorists target civilian populations in order to further their political aims. Simply put, terrorists kill civilians to harm or secure the state. The persons killed in a terrorist attack typically did not provoke their killers. In that fundamental respect, terrorism is predatory violence. We do not ordinarily think of predatory violence as justice-oriented. Terrorism is boundary-crossing violence, deviant violence, which is precisely what makes it terrifying. We may not like war, but we understand it; the same goes for robbery. We may not “understand” terrorism within the strictures of our current theories, but that is not terrorism’s fault or, finally, the fault of the theories. It is our fault, our poverty of intellectual imagination, that prevents us from studying terrorism right alongside other forms of predatory or justice-oriented violence. Studying terrorism refines our theories by reminding us that some types of violence cross what we had regarded as inviolable conceptual borders. But our theories also enrich the study of terrorism, because we bring an understanding of the purposeful nature of all types of interpersonal violence to the study of so-called political violence.

So, there is nothing alien about terrorism that should cause criminologists to reject it. We choose not to study it for reasons that have little to do with science, especially for a scientific community that prides itself on being interdisciplinary. We do not study terrorism for reasons of custom and ritual. To borrow an old gag from Thomas Szasz, from a scientific standpoint, the difference between terrorism and common violence is the difference between holy water and water. The basic properties are the same; the difference is whether we regard the violence as sacred and unknowable, or profane. There is nothing sacred about terrorism.

1 A version of this essay was presented at the 2002 summer meeting of the National Consortium on Violence Research, St. Augustine, Florida, June 13, 2002.
2 See the National Research Council's recent report Making the Nation Safer: The Role of Science and Technology in Countering Terrorism (National Academy Press, 2002), chapter 9, for an important initial effort. Significantly, the report contains no reference to criminology or criminologists.
3 Criminologists of all people should be skeptical of the highly trained, thoroughly indoctrinated and disciplined terrorist "soldier." For example, by mid-2002 Palestinian suicide-bombers had become a rather heterogeneous lot, and some clearly did decide on impulse to carry out attacks in Israel. Here is the case of a young female attacker who at the last minute decided to turn back: "She did not go through months, or even weeks of indoctrination. She has no connection to the militantly Islamic groups… that once orchestrated such attacks. She received little more preparation than a demonstration of how to push a button. Her case is becoming typical" (Bennet, J., "The One Who Didn't," International Herald Tribune, June 22-23, 2002, pp. 1,4). And then there was the fellow who tried lighting his shoe on an airplane. The act may not have been impulsive but in all other respects seems uncannily like the typical street crime.

RAND Criminal Justice Reorganized in to RAND Public Safety and Justice

RAND is pleased to announce that its Criminal Justice research unit has been reorganized in to RAND Public Safety and Justice. This reorganization reflects increasing involvement in recent years in public safety issues that transcend criminal justice, including illegal immigration and border control; domestic counterterrorism; terrorism preparedness, and threat and vulnerability management; and emergency first-response capability. Jack Riley will continue as Director of RAND Public Safety and Justice, with Susan Turner as Associate Director for Research and Quality Coordinator, and Andrew Morral serving as Associate Director in RAND’s Washington area office.

Research within RAND Public Safety and Justice has been reorganized into three centers: Criminal Justice Center (headed by Susan Turner), Drug Policy Research Center (a joint effort with RAND Health, headed by Martin Iuchi), and Public Safety Center (headed by acting director, Russ Glenn).

RAND will continue its longstanding commitment to careful analysis of important criminal justice policy questions. For more information, please see: http://www.rand.org/psj/index.html

EXECUTIONER'S CURRENT

Richard Moran's “riveting”* book about Thomas Edison, George Westinghouse and the invention of the electric chair

THE AMAZING STORY of how the development of the electric chair, originally inspired by the search for a more humane way of execution, actually resulted from an effort by one 19th-century electric company—run by Edison—to discredit the other—run by Westinghouse.

“Fascinating reading
[from] the drama of the power companies' competition [to] the trial and execution of the first man to die in the electric chair, and the history of the capital punishment debate in the United States.”
—BOOKLIST

*“A terrific book, A wise and compelling account of an episode in American history that speaks to some of today's most deeply held beliefs about capital punishment...A riveting story.”
—AUSTIN SARAT, author of When the State Kills: Capital Punishment and the American Condition “Scrupulously documented...

Written with care and lucidity”—HUGO ADAM BEDAU, author of The Death Penalty in America

“Moran is a wonderful storyteller
...Edison's attempt to make Westinghouse into America's Dr. Guillotine is worth reading by everyone who cares about business ethics, the death penalty, and justice.”
—ALAN M. DERSHOWITZ

IN MEMORIUM

JOHN PAUL KENNEY
1920 – 2002
ASC President, 1957-1959

Dr. John Paul Kenney died early in the morning of Halloween 2002 of heart failure, he was 82. Jack/JP had not been ailing for long, but he had been hospitalized for the previous month. As a founder of the American Society of Criminology he also served as one of its first presidents. His gruff sense of humor, his laugh, his unyielding kindness, warmth, and devotion to his profession, his family, and his God are the things those of us he touched will miss about him. His contributions to the growth of academic criminology and criminal justice are singular. He will be remembered as a dedicated scholar, loyal colleague, and trusted friend. His life was all about “stamping out ignorance.” He refused to accept mediocrity. The worst sin any of his students or his friends could commit was apathy or less than total commitment. Thinking that less than your best effort would slip past him led to being on the receiving end of one of his “prayer meetings.” JP did not suffer fools lightly but was as quick with a home cooked meal as he was an admonition.

Jack was literally born and raised on a farm outside Morristown, South Dakota; took his undergraduate degree at the University of California, Berkeley; became a Berkeley California police officer; was a naval communications officer in the Pacific during World War II; received his doctorate from UCLA; became a professor at the University of Southern California’s Department of Public Administration; was appointed to and became president of the Los Angeles Board of Police Commissioners; served as Deputy Director of the California Department of Criminal Justice’s Division of Law Enforcement; returned to the academy to direct graduate studies at California State University Long Beach’s Department of Criminal Justice; and fulfilled a long-time dream by creating August Vollmer University, a unique criminal justice only graduate education institution. This diversity of experience and blend of practical, academic, and policy positions attests to his commitment and devotion to all things related to criminal justice. He was preceded in death by his first wife Dorothy, and is survived by his current wife Helen, his sons, Rick, Ron, and Roger, daughter Diane, their children, and grandchildren.

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CRIME ANALYSTS (IACA)

The International Association of Crime Analysts (IACA) announces its intention to publish a comprehensive handbook of critical analytical skills necessary to become an IACA Certified Crime Analyst. The IACA is seeking experienced professionals in the law enforcement field to write chapters for the book. Selected authors will be expected to be or become a member of IACA, contribute their topic chapter, teach at the 2003 Conference, and be prepared to instruct the training area for the IACA on an as needed basis based on demand for training in the specific topic. The IACA will pay reasonable expenses of the successful applicant to attend the 2003 Conference in Kansas City, Missouri (October 27-30) where he or she will present a training session in the competence area. Future opportunities for additional training instruction will depend upon demand.

The IACA was formed in 1990 to help crime and intelligence analysts around the world improve their skills and make valuable contacts; to help law enforcement agencies make the best use of crime analysis; and to advocate for standards of performance and technique within the profession itself. To this end the IACA is dedicated to high professional standards, to providing practical educational opportunities and to the creation of an international network for the standardization of analytic techniques. IACA membership is largely from agencies within the United States of America. International members include analysts from Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, the Netherlands, South Africa, and the United Kingdom.

Additional information about the IACA, specific skill topics, author selection and topic submission procedures can be found on the web at <http://www.iaca.net>. Written inquiries will be received at IACA, PMB 318,2839 West Kennewick Avenue, Kennewick, WA 99336, USA.

JOHN PAUL KENNEY
1920 – 2002
ASC President, 1957-1959

Jack Kenney exemplified, what many have strived or wanted to do and be, and that was to be a true professional. Jack did his undergraduate work at the University of California and was awarded a Ph.D. from UCLA. He was a former Berkeley, CA police officer and a consultant on juvenile control for the California Youth Authority. Jack was the past president of the City of Los Angeles Police Commission (LAPD) and a former Director of the Division of Law Enforcement, Department of Justice, State of California. He entered the teaching profession at the College of Sequoias before an extended teaching career at the University of Southern California and California State University, Long Beach. He served numerous times on accreditation panels for the Western and Northwestern Association of Schools and Colleges evaluating criminology programs offered by institutions of higher learning.

Within the field he was known as an expert on juvenile delinquency. For many years he was positively related to the Delinquency Control Institute at the University of Southern California. His well-respected text, Police Work With Juveniles has gone through numerous revisions and became the bible in that area of specialty. In order to keep this text current he has had numerous co-authors over the last two decades.

Jack was an active researcher and participated in a number of national studies. He was a consultant for the National Institute of Justice, the California Assembly, the Illinois Attorney General, and the US Children’s Bureau. He served as a recruiter for the Office of Public Safety, Agency of International Development (AID) identifying police consultants who would serve overseas. He served two (2) years in Iran as a police advisor and one of his last stints overseas was in Bangkok, Thailand as the keynote speaker at the First International Conference on Peace Keeping, Order Maintenance and Crime Control.

Jack was the founder and President of August Vollmer University, a private institution that offered degrees in criminology through the doctorate. Its student body was primarily in-service personnel from local and federal agencies. Courses were offered in Sacramento and Southern California. The University focused on students, their needs, and the preparation of professional criminal justice personnel. Jack was especially gifted at relating to students and was viewed as someone that you could turn to for counsel and assistance. His graduate students will remember, with fondness, the weekends spent at his mountain home in Blue Jay, CA. presenting and defending their research projects.

Jack was a past president of the American Society of Criminology (ASC) and a member of a small group of professors who founded the International Association of Police Professors; this latter organization evolved into the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences (ACJS). His texts included Police Administration, and Police Planning. Additionally, he co-authored Patrol Field Problems and Solutions, Police Executive Handbook, and Principles of Investigation.

As a pioneer in the field his contributions have served as a solid foundation for the discipline of Criminology/Criminal Justice. His colleagues held Jack in high esteem and he will be missed by those who had the privilege of working with him.

THE SECOND ANNUAL EUROPEAN SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY CONFERENCE
TOLEDO, SPAIN – September 4-7, 2002
"Sharing Borders, Sharing a Discipline"

by

Rosemary Barberet, University of Leicester (Programme Chair)
and
Christina Rechea Alberola, Universidad de Castilla-LaMancha (Conference Organizer)

The Second Annual Conference of the European Society of Criminology in Toledo, Spain, was a huge success, not only because of the number of participants and the beautiful venue, but also because of the high quality of sessions and promising plans for further conferences and ESC related activities. The feedback from the conference has been overwhelmingly positive, and plans are underway for the 2003 conference in Helsinki, 27-30 August, 2003 (www.eurocrim2003.com). The ESC has thus established itself as the main European venue for discussing research-based criminology and the main conference, after the American Society of Criminology.

The conference was inaugurated by the Minister of Justice, Jose Maria Michavila, the Regional President of Castilla-La Mancha, Jose Bono, the Mayor of Toledo, Jose Manuel Molina Garcia, the Rector of the University of Castilla-La Mancha, Luis Arroyo Zapatero, ESC President Josine Junger-Tas and Conference Organizer Cristina Rechea Alberola. Much of the Minister’s and Regional President’s comments dealt with the importance of combating terrorism, particularly Basque Nationalist Terrorism, and referred to recent developments in Spain whereby the political party that supports ETA, Batasuna, was in the process of being illegalised. This is a particularly sensitive issue for Spain; indeed Regional President Jose Bono’s political party (PSOE, the Spanish Socialist Workers Party) was illegal under Franco’s regime. Rector Luis Arroyo, also Professor of Criminal Law, gave a lengthy and well-received speech on the history of criminology and its usefulness for informing criminal law. ESC President Josine Junger-Tas provided a gracious welcome to all ESC participants, thanking the University of Castilla-La Mancha for its hospitality, and Conference Organizer Cristina Rechea noted the important symbolism of the conference venue, the city of Toledo where for eight centuries, Muslim, Jewish and Christian cultures lived in harmony. Rechea also welcomed the 12 participants from EU Accession States for whom the ESC had spent 8000 euros in travel grants in order to encourage attendance.

ESC-Toledo attracted a total of 506 participants. 376 papers were presented on 91 panels. Four plenary sessions (on criminal justice experiments; the contribution of psychology to criminology; research on violence; and transitions and problems of crime and order) were complemented by an attractive poster session with 20 posters, a sizeable book exhibit, a restricted but fascinating visit to the new Aranjuez prison where family cells have been built where women and men who are both serving a sentence may reside with their young children, and many opportunities for meeting others, whether at refreshment breaks, over meals or at the gala dinner on the Friday evening.

Participants came from a total of 47 countries, including Albania, Argentina, Armenia, Australia, Austria, Belarus, Belgium, Canada, Croatia, Czech Republic, China, Chile, Cyprus, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Georgia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Lithuania, Malta, Mexico, New Zealand, Luxembourg, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Russia, Slovakia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Gambia, The Netherlands, Togo, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, USA and Venezuela. Most represented were the UK (122 or 25%), Spain (60 or 12%) and the USA (40 or 8%). Many leaders of other criminology associations were in attendance: Larry Sherman of the International Society of Criminology, Chris Estridge of the American Society of Criminology, Richard Bennett of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences, Michel Born of the Association Internationale de Criminologues de Langue Francaise, Pierre Tourrier of the Association Francaise de Criminologie, and Anatoliy Zakaliuk of the Ukrainian Public Association On Criminology. Encouragingly, 91 or nearly a fifth of those attending were students.

The most popular themes at the conference were organised and white collar crime (11 panel sessions), Corrections and Alternatives to Incarceration (10 panel sessions), Policing and Social Justice (8 panel sessions) and Violence (7 panel sessions).

This year, the ESC President, the Programme Chair and the Conference Organiser were all women. This, coupled with the fact that the programme committee was 50% women and 50% men, surely had something to do with the fact that women were well represented at the conference. Forty percent of the presenters were women as were 42% of the session chairs. These numbers are relatively high compared to other criminology conferences. In addition, 25% of the plenary speakers were women.

The ESC is publishing a journal with Sage, the European Journal of Criminology (Editor: David Smith, University of Edinburgh). Currently, plans are underway for next year’s conference in Helsinki, with the theme “Crime and Crime Control in an Integrating Europe”. Abstracts are due by April 30th to Kaako Aromaa: kaako.aromaa@om.fi, Tel: +358 9 160 67881, Fax: +358 9 160 67890, Scandinavian Research Council for Criminology, HEUNI, PB 557, FIN-00121 Helsinki, Finland. ESC Membership can be gained by contacting ESC headquarters in Lausanne: Martin Killias, IPSC/BCH, UNIL, CH-1015 Lausanne, Switzerland, Martin.Killias@ips.unil.ch.
UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

INSTITUTE OF CRIMINOLOGY

The Institute of Criminology, founded by the University of Cambridge in 1959, has a strong international reputation for academic excellence. The Institute has one of the world's most distinguished senior faculties which includes Sir Anthony Bottoms, Manuel Eisner, David Farrington, Loraine Gelsthorpe, Alison Liebling, Michael Tonry, Per-Olof Wikström, and Andrew von Hirsch. Its multi-disciplinary staff have backgrounds in criminology, sociology, psychiatry, psychology, philosophy, geography, history, and law.

Radzinowicz Library
The Institute's library is named after Sir Leon Radzinowicz, the first Director of the Institute, and has one of the world's pre-eminent criminology research collections, including a wide selection of books, papers, periodicals, and historical materials. The library holds over 50,000 books and 18,000 pamphlets, receives nearly 300 periodicals and has an aggressive acquisitions policy.

The Institute offers a wide range of graduate programmes:
- M.Phil. Degrees in Criminology or Criminological Research (the largest full-time graduate criminology course in the UK)
- Ph.D. in Criminology
- Diploma/M.St. in Applied Criminology and Police Studies
- Diploma/M.St. in Applied Criminology and Prison Studies

Students come from around the world, with very strong undergraduate records in law, or social or behavioural science subjects, or extensive professional experience in the criminal justice system. The Institute admits approximately 40 M.Phil. students and 4-8 Ph.D. students each year. A number of awards and studentships are available from the University of Cambridge, including the recently established Gates Cambridge Scholarships for non-UK citizens, and other funding bodies:

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY
Announces
FELLOWSHIP FOR ETHNIC MINORITIES
UP TO $18,000

Deadline: March 1, 2003

ELIGIBILITY: The Fellowship is designed to encourage African American, Asian American, Latino, and Native American students to enter the field of criminology and criminal justice. Applicants need not be members of the American Society of Criminology. Individuals studying criminology or criminal justice issues are encouraged to apply. The recipient or recipients of the Fellowship must be accepted into a program of doctoral studies.

APPLICATION PROCEDURES: A complete application package must be received no later than March 1, 2003. A complete application must contain (1) up-to-date curriculum vita; (2) indication of race or ethnicity; (3) copies of undergraduate and graduate transcripts; (4) statement of need and prospects for financial assistance for graduate study; (5) a letter describing career plans, salient experiences, and nature of interest in criminology and criminal justice; and (6) three letters of reference.

NOTIFICATION: Award(s) will be made by June 1, 2003.

Applications should be sent to: Sarah Hall, Administrator, American Society of Criminology, 1314 Kinnear Road, Suite 212, Columbus, Ohio 43212-1156.

The Society reserves the right not to award the Fellowship.

Update Regarding the Adam's Mark Hotel Chain

The next annual meeting of the ASC will be held at the Adam's Mark Hotel in Denver, Colorado, on November 19-22, 2003. The ASC leadership has an on-going concern regarding the allegations of systemic discriminatory practices within the Adam's Mark Hotel chain. The matter continues to be the subject of significant discussion within the ASC Executive Board. Extensive conversations have been held between the ASC Executive Director and several high ranking officials within the Adam's Mark organization. Both the St. Louis chapter and the national headquarters of the NAACP have also been contacted by the ASC Executive Director. Based on all of the available information, we believe that the Adam's Mark Hotel chain has begun to aggressively address the problem, and has realized some measure of success. For example, the entire Adam's Mark chain was recently audited by Project Equality, a national civil rights organization. This three-month independent audit uncovered, "no signs of intent to discriminate," and gave the chain high marks for its "inclusiveness of women and persons of color." We urge ASC members to log on to the Adam's Mark web page and read the settlement agreement between the NAACP and the Adam's Mark as well as other Adam's Mark diversity initiatives (www.adamsmark.com/diversity.asp). While we believe that the Adam's Mark chain is functioning responsibly at this time, the ASC leadership will continue to monitor the matter and periodically update ASC members on this issue. If you have any specific questions or concerns, please contact John H. Laub, ASC President (jlaub@crim.umd.edu) and Chris Eskridge, ASC Executive Director (ceskridge2@unl.edu)
NOMINATIONS FOR ASC FELLOWS

The ASC Fellows Committee invites nominations for Fellows in the Society. This title is available to those members of the Society in good standing who have achieved distinction in criminology. The ASC Executive Board approved the following clarification of this distinction. “The honorary title “Fellow” recognizes persons who have made a scholarly contribution to the intellectual life of the discipline, whether in the form of a singular, major piece of scholarship or cumulative scholarly contributions. Longevity alone is not sufficient. In addition, a Fellow must have a significant contribution to the field through the career development of other criminologists and/or through organizational activities within the ASC.”

The names of those who have been awarded the Fellow status will be announced at the 2003 Annual Meeting and the candidates will be acknowledged by the Society with the presentation of a Certificate.

In your nominating letter, please describe the reasons for your nomination and include a copy of the nominees curriculum vitae (or make arrangements to have it sent to the Committee). All materials should be received by March 1, 2003 to:

NOMINATIONS FOR 2003 ASC AWARDS

The ASC Awards Committee invites nominations for four major awards, to be presented at the 2003 annual meetings. In submitting your nominations, provide the following supporting materials: a letter evaluating a nominee’s contribution and its relevance to an award, and the nominee's c.v. (short version preferred) by March 1, 2003 to the appropriate committee chair. The awards:

EDWIN H. SUTHERLAND AWARD, which recognizes outstanding scholarly contributions to theory or research in criminology on the etiology of criminal and deviant behavior, the criminal justice system, corrections, law or justice. The distinguished contribution may be based on a single outstanding book or work, on a series of theoretical or research contributions, or on the accumulated contributions by a senior scholar.

NOMINATIONS FOR 2003

MICHAEL J. HINDELANG AWARD

For the Most Outstanding Contribution to Criminology

The American Society of Criminology has established the Michael J. Hindelang Award, to be given annually for a book published during the previous two to three years that makes the most outstanding contribution to research in criminology. To be considered, a book must be nominated by an individual, as opposed to a corporate, member of the ASC. The Committee will not consider anthologies and/or edited volumes. The Award will be presented during the annual meeting of the Society. The Executive Board may decide not to give the Award in a given year.

The Award Committee is soliciting nominations for the Michael J. Hindelang Award. To nominate a book, please send the title of the book, its authors, the publisher, the year of the publication, and a brief discussion of your reasons for the recommendation to the Awards Committee. The deadline for receiving nominations is February 15, 2003. Send your nomination to:

THOMAS J. BERNARD, CHAIR
Michael J. Hindelang Award Committee
Crime, Law and Justice
Pennsylvania State University
917 Oswald Tower
University Park, PA 16802-6215
814-863-0132
814-863-7216 FAX

RUTHER SHONLE CAVAN YOUNG SCHOLAR AWARD

Sponsored by Wadsworth Publishing Co.

This Award will be given to recognize outstanding scholarly contributions to the discipline of criminology by someone who has received the Ph.D., MD, LLD, or a similar graduate degree no more than 5 years before the selection for the award (for this year the degree must have been awarded no earlier than May of 1998). The Award may be for a single work or a series of contributions, and may include coauthored works.

Those interested in being considered for the award or nominating someone for the Award should send copies of applicant’s/ nominee’s vitae and published works to:

MARK WARRAY
Department of Sociology
University of Texas at Austin
Austin, TX 78712-1088
512-232-6317
512-471-1748 FAX
Mwarray@mail.utexas.edu

Seven copies of all materials submitted in support of a nomination must be received by March 1, 2003. The person selected for the Award will receive a plaque commemorating the Award, one thousand dollars, and up to five hundred dollars toward airfare to travel to the ASC Annual Meetings.
STUDENTS - CALL FOR ENTRIES

2003 ASC GENE CARTE STUDENT PAPER COMPETITION

We invite participation in The American Society of Criminology Gene Carte Student Paper Competition. These awards are given to recognize outstanding scholarly work of students. Following are the procedures for the 2003 competition.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE

Any student currently enrolled on a full-time basis in an academic program at either the undergraduate or graduate level. Persons who are previous first place prize winners of this competition are ineligible.

SPECIFICATIONS FOR PAPERS

No paper may be submitted to more than one ASC student competition for the same year. Any paper that has previously won any prize in any ASC competition is ineligible for submission to another ASC competition. Papers may be conceptual and/or empirical but must be directly related to criminology. Papers must be typewritten, double-spaced on 8-1/2x11 white paper, and no longer than 7,500 words. The CRIMINOLOGY format for the organization of text, citations and references should be used. Authors' names, departments and advisors (option) must appear ONLY on the title page, since papers will be evaluated anonymously. The next page of the manuscript should include the title and a 100-word abstract. The author must submit EIGHT copies of the manuscript, accompanied by a letter indicating the author's enrollment status and co-signed by the dean, department chair or program director.

DEADLINE: Papers must be submitted with a postmarked on or before April 15, 2003 to:

PAMELA K. LATTIMORE
Crime, Justice Policy and Behavior
Research Triangle Institute
P.O. ox 12194, 3040 Cornwallis Road
Research Triangle Park, NC 27709-2194
919/485-7759 919/485-7700 FAX
lattimore@rti.org

PROCEDURES FOR JUDGING ENTRIES

The Student Awards Committee will rate entries according to criteria such as the quality of the conceptualization, significance of the topic, clarity and aptness of methods, quality of the writing, command of relevant work in the field, and contribution to criminology. The Committee's award determinations will be final.

AWARDS

The 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place papers will be awarded prizes of $500, $300, and $200, respectively and will be eligible for presentation at the 2003 meeting of The American Society of Criminology in Denver, Colorado, November 19-22, 2003. The 1st prize winner also will be granted a travel award to the meeting. The Committee may decide that no entry is of sufficient quality to declare a winner. Fewer than three awards may be given. Prize-winning students will be acknowledged at the Annual Meeting Awards Ceremony.

NOTIFICATION OF AWARDS

The author(s) of entries selected by the judges for awards will be notified in writing by August 1, 2003.
WESTERN SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY ANNUAL MEETING
February 20-23, 2003
Vancouver, B.C.

Come join the Western Society of Criminology in 2003 in Vancouver, B.C. for the 30th Annual Conference of the WSC. The conference will be held on February 20-23, 2003. The meetings will be held at the Sutton Place, a 5-star hotel in the heart of downtown Vancouver. Room rates will be $169 Canadian or about $100 U.S. Check out our website for further information: http://www.sonom.edu/cja/wsc/wscmain.html.

IN SEARCH OF SECURITY: AN INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON POLICING AND SECURITY
Sponsored by the Law Commission of Canada
February 19-22, 2003, Montreal, Quebec

The purpose of In Search of Security is to bring together the world’s leading experts on policing and security to examine the complex relationship that is emerging between public and private police. The program will be designed to examine the provision of security from a variety of disciplines, and through both theoretical and empirical lenses. For more information about the conference, please contact the Commission at: policing@lcc.gc.ca or dcooley@lcc.gc.ca.

CAMPBELL COLLABORATION COLLOQUIUM 2003
February 27-28, 2003
Hotel Hilton Stockholm Slussen
Stockholm, Sweden

The Campbell Collaboration is an emerging international effort that aims to help people make well-informed decisions by preparing, maintaining and promoting access to systematic reviews of studies on the effects of social and behavioral interventions. We are pleased to announce the Third Annual Collaboration Colloquium to be held on Thursday and Friday, February 27-28, 2003 at the Hotel Hilton Stockholm Slussen in Stockholm, Sweden.

DIVISION NEWS

The Division on People of Color and Crime thanks all of you who supported our panels, meetings, and symposium. Our guest speaker, Dr. Manning Marable, was excellent. We were honored that he continued his discussion with our group for about two hours after the symposium ended.

I am also pleased to introduce the 2003 Board of the DPCC. They are:

Stephanie Bush-Baskette – Chair
Ramiro Martinez – Vice Chair
Nancy Rodriguez – Secretary

Delores Jones-Brown, Executive Counselor
Katheryn Russell, Executive Counselor
Monique W. Morris, Executive Counselor

I look forward to working with each of them this coming year.

I urge all of you to join and participate in the Division. For those of you who are members, please remember to pay your dues. Although the amount is nominal, collectively the funds allow us to subsidize each ticket purchased for the symposium by approximately $20.00. The ticket plus the subsidy covers only the cost of each meal.

Additionally, we have several committees that you may join. Please contact me at sbushbask@aol.com or 850-894-0364 for additional information. I look forward to working with you on behalf of the division on People of Color and Crime.

Stephanie R. Bush-Baskette, JD, PhD
DPCC Chairperson
The 2003 Annual Meeting of the American Society of Criminology will be held from Wednesday, November 19 through Saturday, November 22, 2003. The 2003 Program solicits papers for presentation in five broadly defined areas:

THEORY – Theories of Offending, Theories of Victimization, Theories of Criminal Justice

RESEARCH METHODS – Quantitative Methods, Qualitative Methods, Cross-National/Comparative/Historical Methods, Research Syntheses and Meta-Analyses

OFFENDERS AND VICTIMS – Research on Groups, Research on Organizations, Research on Types of Crime

PREVENTION AND INTERVENTION – Early Prevention in Families, Schools, and Communities; Innovations and Experiments in Policing, Courts, and Corrections; Diffusion and Dissemination: Translating Research into Policy and Practice

CRIMINAL JUSTICE POLICY – Police, Courts, Corrections, Juvenile Justice

All submissions for papers presented are due by March 1, for four types of sessions:

1. Thematic Sessions, based on peer-reviewed 5 page “previews”
2. Regular Sessions, based on title and abstract
3. Poster Sessions, based on title and abstract
4. Round Tables, based on title and abstract

Thematic Sessions will feature papers that have demonstrated substantial preparation, although not completed, by the March 1 deadline. A five-page "preview" of Thematic Session papers should be submitted by March 1, 2003, in whatever form is appropriate for the substance of the paper, such as the research question or the discussion question, research design or data analysis, theoretical methods, a clear method of analysis, and some preliminary results or conclusions. Each preview will be reviewed by one of the members of the Program Committee. Papers not accepted for Thematic Sessions will be returned to authors for revision and re-review, or assigned to a Regular Session. All accepted five-page previews submitted by individuals will be combined with other relevant papers into Thematic Sessions formed by the Program Committee. Participants are encouraged to submit proposals for entire Thematic Sessions, focused on a specific topic, theme, or issue. In order to encourage more interaction with session audiences, we suggest that each panel contain no more than four papers or three papers and a discussant for the 90 minute session.
Regular Sessions require only the submission of an abstract and title by March 1, 2003. Participants are encouraged to submit proposals that would form an entire panel session focused on a specific topic, theme or issue. Like Thematic Sessions, in order to encourage more interaction with session audiences, we suggest that each panel contain no more than four papers or three papers and a discussant for the 90 minute session. Please be aware that Round Tables will be the venue for all papers submitted after March 1, 2003.

Poster Sessions will be held on Thursday afternoon, November 20, 2003. Poster sessions should display data, policy analyses or theoretical work in a visually appealing poster format to encourage more interactive communication. ASC will provide no AV equipment for these sessions. Authors should submit a title and abstract by March 1, 2003.

Round Tables will consist of three to six presenters on related topics/themes organized either by the Program Committee or by participants in Participant-Formed Round Tables. Submissions should include an abstract and title. ASC will provide no AV equipment for these sessions. Round Tables will be the venue for all papers submitted after March 1, 2003.

Operating Rules:

The “two appearance” rule will apply: ONLY ONE FIRST AUTHOR PRESENTATION and one other appearance as chair or discussant; unlimited appearances as co-author. This rule was suspended for the 2002 meeting, but is back in force for the 2003 meeting.

Individual submissions for Thematic Sessions, Regular Sessions, and Round Tables should be submitted to one and only one member of the program committee in the substantive area that most closely matches the topic of the paper. If unsure who to send materials to, please send them to one and only one of the AREA CHAIRS. Individual submissions for Thematic Sessions will be peer-reviewed by the member of the Program Committee that receives the material.

Fully completed Thematic Sessions, Regular Sessions, and Round Tables should be submitted to either one and only one member of the program committee or to the Area Chair in the substantive area that most closely matches the topic of your panel or roundtable. Fully completed Thematic Sessions will be peer-reviewed by the member of the Program Committee that receives the material.

All Poster Sessions should be submitted directly to the AREA CHAIR in the substantive area that most closely matches the topic of your poster presentation.

See Figure 1 for a summary.

How to Submit Materials:

Paper or electronic submissions will be accepted. For electronic submissions, include all required information in the body of the email as opposed to a separate attachment.

On-Line Convention Registration:
This option may be available for the 2003 meetings. Check website (www.ASC41.com) for details.

INDIVIDUALIZED INTERVENTION WITH YOUNG MULTIPLE OFFENDERS
Ted Palmer

Foreword by Francis T. Cullen and Patricia Van Voorhis

Volume 1: California's Community Treatment Project

Part I: An Experiment in Individualized Intervention
Part II: Program Effectiveness and Matching
Part III: Review, Phase 3, Implications, and Key Factors
Part IV: The Feasibility of Community-based, Individualized Intervention

Volume 2: Issues, Theory, and Perspectives

Part I: Issues and Developments
Part II: Rationales, Theory, Ethics, and Trends
Part III: Perspectives on Community-based, Individualized Intervention

Volume 1 of this 1,173 page book details all aspects of the intensive, low case-load, multimodal, in-lieu-of-institutionalization Community Treatment Program that operated in three urban settings, including San Francisco, collectively for twenty-five years. Compared to randomly assigned controls, CTP reduced arrests and convictions, including those for violent offenses, by 35%-to-50% for males, on several years of followup within those settings; it also markedly reduced costs to society. Based on thousands of observations by on-site researchers over twelve years, key factors contributing to CTP's success are identified, as are the program's core operations, essential requirements, and main supporting conditions. The feasibility of CTP and of modifications thereof is examined at length, as are these programs' applicability to a range of conditions and correctional contexts, such as specialized individual caseloads within probation.

Volume 2 provides sets of concepts for (1) understanding serious young offenders as human beings--particularly their interests and motivations, their social/developmental needs as adolescents, and their related practical challenges, interpersonal issues, and ambivalence--and for (2) understanding why these youths do or do not respond positively to given approaches, to specified types of staff (parole agents), and to particular attitudes as well as relationships. It also examines the ethics of, and presents a social-protection rationale for, needs- and-growth-centered (NGC) intervention. Further, it describes several individualized, non-California based programs that long-operated within the USA and Canada.

In the final analysis, the book shows how and why intervention must be based on careful and updated diagnosis (not mainly on risk-assessments, checklists, and/or broad classifications), be quickly responsive to crisis and change, be flexible, and be focused as well as carefully coordinated, if it is to achieve considerable long-term, internally sustained, behavioral change and related social adjustment with multiply problem offenders. The bearing of community-based, individualized NGC intervention on today's restorative justice approaches becomes evident, as do the critical differences between such intervention and the latter.

CALL FOR PAPERS

ACA Seeks Article Submissions for Peer-Reviewed Research Journal

Have you just completed a research study or scholarly essay that you think would be of interest to those in corrections? Corrections Compendium, the monthly journal of the American Correctional Association, is seeking submissions for upcoming issues. Its international readership includes individuals involved in various sectors of the corrections and criminal justice fields, including individuals employed in academia, correctional institutions and community corrections, to those in probation and parole and juvenile services. A leading peer-reviewed publication in the corrections field, Compendium welcomes you to submit your research-based papers for possible publication. We are open to submissions on all subjects — provided that they relate to corrections and adhere to standards of quality scholarship. A typical article is approximately 3,000 to 6,000 words, excluding references, endnotes, tables, charts, etc. All submissions are reviewed by members of our editorial advisory board. Articles must not have been published elsewhere or be under consideration by another publication. Do you think you may have just what we are looking for? If so, please send your article on an IBM-compatible disk in WordPerfect or Microsoft Word format, double spaced, with any tables or charts at the end of the copy, and accompanied by a hard copy to: Susan Clayton, Managing Editor, American Correctional Association, 4380 Forbes Boulevard, Lanham, MD 20706-4322; or e-mail it to: susanc@aca.org. Please remember to include your name, title, affiliation, address, daytime telephone number, fax number and e-mail address.

HOMICIDE STUDIES

Special Issue on Missing Data

Homicide Studies announces a Call for Papers for a special issue of Missing Data. The issue will focus on problems posed by missing values, observations, and/or cases in homicide datasets, approaches to handling missing data in homicide research, changes in the patterns of missing data over time, and the impact of different missing data estimation techniques on empirical findings in homicide research. Manuscripts must follow the editorial submission guidelines of Homicide Studies. Deadline for submissions is March 1, 2003. All papers will be peer reviewed. Please mail the completed manuscript to one of the Special Issue Editors. If you are unsure whether your topic of research is suitable, contact one of the Special Issue Editors at e-mail or phone:

WESTERN CRIMINOLOGY REVIEW
The Western Criminology Review is the official journal of the Western Society of Criminology, and we invite all ASC members to submit their research to the journal. Published twice a year, WCR is an on-line, peer-reviewed outlet for scholarly research in all matters important to criminology and criminal justice. The journal is intended to reflect local (Western), national, and international concerns. Manuscripts are submitted electronically, and all correspondence is conducted online to speed the review process. Due to the advantages of being an online journal, there are no page, color, or appendix restrictions; therefore, authors can include hypertext links and images at their discretion. Our evaluation process of submitted papers involves a brief internal consideration by editorial staff, followed by a blind assessment by two external reviewers. Replies and Comments to previously published articles are encouraged. All submissions should be formatted according to the journal's guidelines for manuscripts, which can be found on the WCR web-site at http://wcr.sonoma.edu. Persons interested in submitting their work to WCR should send inquiries to Gisela Bichler-Robertson or Stephen Tibbetts, Co-Editors, at wcr@sonoma.edu or at Department of Criminal Justice, California State University-San Bernardino, 5500 University Parkway, San Bernardino, CA 92407-2397.
