THE CRIMINOLOGICAL ENTERPRISE AND CORPORATE CRIME

Sally S. Simpson
Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice
University of Maryland

As a corporate crime scholar for nearly 20 years, it is striking how little my generalist colleagues know about this area of specialization in spite of the efforts of a small group of dedicated scholars. A quick perusal of most criminology textbooks reveals what passes for “common” knowledge in this area—a little bit on Sutherland and a lot about competing definitions and offense typologies. In fact, these summaries have changed little over the years except, of course, in the illustrative cases that demonstrate a particular offense type, the relative costs of corporate crime, or the paltry response of social control agents. Why is this the case? Several inter-related explanations come to mind. (1) Corporate (and white-collar) crime research rarely is sponsored and funded. Hence, most researchers have limited resources at their disposal. This lessens both the scope of the research questions one can address and the availability of data to explore other questions. (2) Epistemological approaches in this subfield often are at odds with those taken and advocated in traditional criminology. Hence, corporate crime as an area of study has been marginalized from mainstream criminology. (3) Corporate crime is a complex phenomenon and tough to study—hence advances in this field are more difficult than in other areas of criminology.

The goal of this essay is to assess these explanations and discuss their implications for (re-)integrating corporate crime into the criminological enterprise. As part of this exercise, I will highlight research areas that pose interesting questions and puzzles for the entire field. Before doing so, however, and because the focus of this essay is on corporate crime, let me distinguish this kind of offending from other types of white-collar crime. Sutherland (1949:9) defined white-collar crime as “crime committed by a person of respectability and high social status in the course of his occupation.” Because this definition was imprecise in many ways, those who studied organizations—especially businesses, differentiated illegal acts by organizations and/or officials of the organization to achieve organization goals from those enacted by employees for personal gain and directed against the organization. Although there are many debates about the utility of these definitions or even if it is necessary to make these distinctions, I am convinced that the typological distinction is useful until theory and evidence confirm otherwise.

1 For the sake of brevity, I am not citing particular works unless directly quoting or paraphrasing from them.

AROUND THE ASC

CYNTHIA BURKE was recently promoted by the San Diego Association of Governments (SANDAG) to Director of the regional agency’s Criminal Justice Research Division. Burke, who has worked for the agency since 1992, served most recently as a Senior Regional Planner.

ASC members CHRISTY A. VISHER (Urban Institute) and PAMELA K. LATTIMORE (Research Triangle Institute) are the recipients of and co-principal investigators for an $11.8 million award from the National Institute of Justice to evaluate the Serious, Violent Offender Reentry Initiative. The 5-year project will evaluate and assess the impact of a $100 million federal initiative to improve the post-release outcomes of prisoners along criminal justice, employment, education, health, and housing dimensions.

FUNDING

Of the billions of dollars allocated to crime and criminal justice research, only a small percent of that total has been devoted to studies of white-collar and corporate crime. Over the past 25 years, the National Institute of Justice funded several large projects and some smaller grants, but the sum total of research monies designated to this subject are trivial. In FY 1995, for instance, only one such grant was awarded (95-IJ-CX-0030, $35,504); and although the award amount was greater in FY 1996 ($102,000), the number of white-collar/corporate crime grants funded was the same—one (96-IJ-CX-0010). There were no projects funded in FY 1997. During this time and in terms of raw counts, more corporate crime (and related) projects were funded at the National Science Foundation (Program on Law and Social Sciences). At NSF, approximately six projects and one dissertation had original start dates between 1995 and 1997. However, most of the NSF research projects between 1988 and 2003 are not concerned with crime per se. Rather, the dominant focus of these projects is on legal and compliance questions as they relate to organizations. Consequently, most basic corporate crime research is unfunded and conducted on a limited budget.

Corporate crime research lacks sponsorship for a multitude of reasons. Researchers may not submit proposals for funding consideration and agencies cannot fund what they do not receive. Agencies respond to disciplinary direction. If corporate crime research marginal to the field of criminology, agencies are less likely to consider it grant-worthy. Corporate crime research may be understood to fit outside of the agency funding mandate (e.g., the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994).

While these and other explanations may be true, the purpose here is not to account for the lack of funding but rather to emphasize the consequences of this fact. The advancement of knowledge depends on resources. For example, much of what we know about street crime (etiology, correlates, patterns) is tied directly to sponsored research and secondary analysis of available data sets (e.g., NYS, NCVS, RYDS, Philadelphia Cohort Studies, Pittsburgh Youth Study, Denver Youth Survey, the Chicago Program on Human Development, the Dunedin Longitudinal Study, and the National Violence Against Women Survey, and so on). With a few notable exceptions, corporate crime researchers have nothing comparable. Subsequently, the knowledge base is limited. Research questions are limited in scope. We are restricted in how we train graduate students and future scholars in this field.

EPISTEMOLOGY

It is probably fair to say that most corporate crime scholars have emerged out of and share a more critical perspective than is true of the field generally. Explanations for corporate offending and the behavior of law, therefore, often draw from Marxist and other radical traditions that may reject the positivist paradigm embraced by the rest of the field and the quantification that accompanies it. It is rare for such work to appear in mainstream criminological journals, to inform policy debates, or even get a hearing in plenary panels at professional meetings. Thus, there is merit to the assertion that corporate crime research is marginal in criminology.

Yet, within this body of work are important observations and assertions that have emerged from empirical (if not quantitative) research. Scholars have shown, for instance, how changes in economic conditions affect political authority (legitimation). During economic downturns, business interests often gain the upper hand with political authorities and push for less regulation (or at least less stringent enforcement of existing law). Deregulation is associated with increased corporate misconduct. Intriguingly, some case studies have also revealed that government responses to cases of misconduct during these times have been aggressive and punitive.

5 As a recent NIJ grant recipient (2001 IJCX 0020, $315,792), I can attest that there are some supportive voices at NIJ in the white-collar crime area. However, funding priorities were and are with political as well as policy considerations. Crises involving corporations such as the savings and loan frauds, securities violations, and fraud in the health care industry have prompted federal research projects in these areas, but such reactive funding often misses less trendy but putatively more substantial research issues.
6 Corporate crime is inclusive, however, of actions that result in death, significant injury, and other hazards to human health
7 Rejection of quantitative studies by corporate crime scholars may reflect epistemological or data quality concerns. Data are notoriously poor in
Why this apparent paradox exists is unclear at this point, but research of this kind has produced a set of interesting findings that should be of interest to all criminologists. What causes law to change? Are the processes similar across legal systems (e.g., civil, regulatory, and criminal law). Do laws that govern the behavior of individuals change in the same manner as those that govern the behavior of corporations? Moreover, the debate between pro-regulation (or pro-criminalization) forces and deregulators is similar to a more general criminological question: when do sanctions deter and when are they possibly criminogenic?

The instrumental Marxist approaches that dominated the field in the 1970s have been replaced with more contemporary critical perspectives. For example, corporate crime scholars are examining the impact of privatization on mixed economies or LDC's and the decline of the nation state in the context of globalization. The subsequent question of how to control the illegal behavior of multinational corporations in the world economy overlaps with many other criminological issues related to globalization (e.g., terrorism, international organized crime, cybercrime).

Finally, a substantial amount of corporate crime research draws from other theoretical and empirical traditions. Corporate crime scholars have evaluated and tested the scope claims of a general theory of crime. Anomie theory has been used to explain corporate offending and organizational misconduct and, as already noted, the effects of sanctions on offending patterns has been explored by a number of scholars who are informed by a variety of theoretical approaches. Much of the work acknowledges the weaknesses of traditional criminological theory as applied to organizational forms with advocates proposing integrated theoretical approaches (including the integration of organizational theories). Especially salient are important similarities and differences between business organizations and other groups of interest to criminologists (e.g., gangs and organized crime). Although there are features of legitimate organizations that render criminological research difficult, these are not necessarily unique to the study of corporations.

COMPLEXITY

In my opinion, the main difficulties confronting corporate crime scholars have to do with access, measurement, quality and type of available data, and the unit of analysis. To conduct research with executives or other corporate personnel, one must penetrate the corporate veneer and there is a skill in "marketing" the research problem to the guardians at the gate. Corporations are image-sensitive and fear any kind of exposure that may cause reputational damage. Thus, just getting a foot in the door is often a major accomplishment. Getting executives to talk about crime is an even greater challenge. If one company allows research access, the next issue relates to sampling. With whom does one talk or survey? Usually, access is limited to select personnel and not the entire company. Thus, representativeness of respondents is an additional issue. Finally, it is important to recognize that getting into one company does not guarantee access anywhere else. This situation is a far cry from the relative ease of gathering self-reports from high school and university students.

Another problem for corporate criminologists has to do with measurement. While criminologists are comfortable talking about rates of offending and changes in rates over time, how does this translate into something meaningful for corporations? It is not at all clear how to calculate a corporate crime rate and what that would tell us about patterns and trends over time. Defining a reasonable denominator is difficult enough (e.g., per corporation, per transaction unit), but the numerator of the rate is also not straightforward. Many corporate offenses involve multiple inter-connected actors (and organizations) over lengthy periods of time (think price-fixing and securities frauds). The trick is to capture series incidents in measurement along with those that involve isolated actors. Additionally, it is unclear whether rates should be calculated within corporations (and perhaps weighted by responsibility) or across corporate units. Assuming that we can (and should) solve the rate problem, what kind of data are available to construct corporate crime rates? There is no UCR-like national data base that can be used for this purpose. Instead, there is publicly available case information from a multitude of sources that may or may not have anything in common regarding case generation and reporting.

8 The selection of these problems reflects my biases as an empirical and sometimes quantitative scholar.
Added to the above difficulties is the fact that there are no systematic procedures for identifying the "hidden" figure of crime. Unquestionably, the traditional techniques for such purposes (e.g., offender self and victimization reports) are problematic due to sampling and generalizability problems (among others), but there is little doubt that this problem is the Achilles heel for our field. Until we measure how much of the behavior is out there and who is doing it, it is nearly impossible to identify any systematic biases that may exist in official data, measure the relative costs of corporate crime vis-à-vis street crime, and offer reasonable policy considerations.

Finally, a significant empirical and theoretical concern in the corporate crime area rests with distinct units of analysis. Both organizations and managers are viable entities under the law and therefore each may be prosecuted, sentenced, and adjudicated. However, theorists have debated whether organizations are something beyond an aggregation of individuals—and, if so, how to theorize and study the micro-macro linkages between the two. Studies of organizations have shown that group membership increases an individual's willingness to take risks and the way a company is structured can affect offending propensity. Again, these kinds of questions are not unique to the corporate crime area. For instance, criminologists who study neighborhoods and communities confront similar micro-macro challenges and environmental criminology examines the relationship between crime and place. The question at hand is why such important theoretical and empirical problems, problems that transcend criminological specialization, are compartmentalized? I hope that this essay offers some insight into the "why" question. Now, I look forward to the (re)integration of corporate crime research into criminology along with the benefits this mutual engagement will bring to our field.

World Encyclopedia of Police Forces and Correctional Systems

The second edition of the World Encyclopedia of Police Forces and Correctional systems is now under way. Planned for publication in two volumes by Gale Group in 2005, it is an ambitious undertaking that will describe the national law enforcement and correctional systems of 229 countries in the world. The purpose of the work is to create the largest encyclopedic database on global law enforcement as it enters the 21st century. The encyclopedia will bring scholarly analysis to bear on a field that has long been ignored by scholars and researchers.

The first edition of the encyclopedia was published in 1988 in one volume. It was—and still remains—the only encyclopedia on police forces in the world. The new encyclopedia has two distinguished editorial boards, an American board of 10 members and an international board of two.

We are now seeking professionals, professors and graduate students in criminal justice sciences and police academies, and others to write the country chapters for the encyclopedia. A suitable honorarium is being offered. The encyclopedia will also have overview chapters on aspects of national and global law enforcement.

Societies of Criminology 1st Key Issues Conference

Call for Papers

Paris Renaissance Hotel
May 13 - 15, 2004

THEME: What Works In Reducing Crime

This conference is a first joint effort undertaken by several professional societies of criminology. The primary goal of this conference is to examine evaluative research efforts of programs and initiatives that have demonstrated a positive impact upon the nature and extent of crime. By bringing together the professional societies of criminology worldwide, this conference will strengthen the level of cross-national research cooperation and advance the knowledge base regarding "What Works in Reducing Crime" in a global context. Conference web site:

The partners in this effort to date are:

Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences
American Society of Criminology
Australian and New Zealand Society of Criminology
British Society of Criminology
Campbell Collaboration
Canadian Society of Criminology
Dutch Society of Criminology
French Society of Criminology
Indian Society of Criminology
International Center for the Prevention of Crime
International Society of Criminology
International Society of French Speaking Criminologists
Israeli Society of Criminology
Spanish Society of Criminological Research
World Society of Victimology

The Conference will be held at the Paris Renaissance Hotel from Thursday, May 13 through Saturday, May 15, 2004. Arrangements have been made for sleeping rooms at the Paris Renaissance Hotel at the rate of 250 Euros/night. They can be contacted at 33-1-41-97-50-50 (phone); 33-1-41-97-51-51 (fax); Rhi.parid.events1@renaisancehotels.com. Sleeping room reservation forms are available at www.asc41.com/2004hotelparis.

Registration dues for the meetings will 200 Euros, payable by April 30, 2004. A meeting registration form is available at www.asc41.com/regform1. This form may be either faxed to 402-472-2504 or emailed to dsaylor@unl.edu. The on-line registration form is available at www.asc41.com/regform2. On-site registration will be 300 Euros and will be on a cash only basis. Registration includes a continental breakfast each morning, and a wine and cheese reception on the Friday evening of the meetings.

Those wishing to participate in the Societies of Criminology 1st Key Issues Conference are asked to submit a 250-word abstract that details the nature of the study, the methodology, the major finds, and where appropriate, the policy implications. Abstracts are to be submitted to representatives from the participant's primary professional organization by January 15, 2004 using the abstract form at www.asc41.com/absformparis. 2003 DENVER MEETING

UPDATE ON ANNUAL MEETING IN DENVER

While the thematic and regular sessions are all set for the 2003 annual meeting in Denver scheduled for November 19 thru November 22, we do invite ASC members to submit roundtable and/or poster session abstracts by September 1, 2003. Please submit roundtables to Denise Gottfredson, Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice, University of Maryland, 2220 LeFrak Hall, College Park, MD 20742-8235, (301) 405-4717, FAX (301) 405-4733, dgottfredson@crim.umd.edu. Please submit posters to Sarah Hall, American Society of Criminology, 1314 Kinnear Road, Suite 212, Columbus, OH, 43212-1156, (614) 292-9207, FAX (614) 292-6767. You should know that poster sessions are scheduled for Thursday, November 21, along with a complimentary wine and cheese.

“WELCOME TO DENVER” WEBSITE

The ASC Local Arrangements Committee, chaired by Mary Dodge, University of Colorado at Denver, has prepared a “Welcome to Denver” website for this year’s conference:

http://carbond.cudenver.edu/~m1dodge/asc.htm

The Adam’s Mark, the largest hotel in Colorado, is centrally located in the downtown area on the 16th street pedestrian mall. The hotel is within walking distance of dozens of restaurants, clubs, and attractions (e.g., State Capitol, Denver Art Museum, Civic Center Park, Larimer Square Historic District). Nestled along the Front Range Mountains, within 30 minutes of the hotel, are opportunities for gambling in Central City, hiking in Boulder, or touring the Coors Brewery. Day trips within 1 ½ hours travel distance might include sights in Colorado Springs (Air Force Academy, Pikes Peak, or Garden of the Gods and the Manitou Area), Rocky Mountain National Park, or depending on the weather, skiing at a nearby resort.

CHILD CARE

An on-site child care center will be provided at the ASC meeting this year. The center will be run by a national firm, KiddieCorp.

KiddieCorp is in its seventeenth year of providing high quality children's programs for conventions and other meetings and comes highly recommended by other professional organizations. For more information and to register, go to kiddieCorp's web-site, https://www.kiddiecorp.com/asckids.htm.

Materials will also be mailed to meeting participants mid-summer along with information on presentation dates and times.
NEW EDITOR OF CRIMINOLOGY

After six extremely productive years, the editorial term of Robert J. Bursik, Jr. has come to an end. Beginning April 1, 2003, the editor of CRIMINOLOGY will be Ray Paternoster. As in the past, those wishing to submit manuscripts for review should send four (4) copies of their manuscript and a $10 processing fee (graduate students are exempted from the $10 fee). Manuscripts should now be sent to:

Raymond Paternoster, Editor
Criminology
Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice
2220 LeFrak Hall

DIVISION OF CRITICAL CRIMINOLOGY

CALL FOR EDITOR
CRITICAL CRIMINOLOGY: AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

The Division of Critical Criminology, American Society of Criminology is seeking applications for the position of Editor of Critical Criminology, the official journal of the Division. Critical Criminology is an international journal published three times a year by Kluwer Publishing Company, The Netherlands. The new Editor will be responsible for Volume 12 - 14 of the journal, approximately a three year term. Application for the position of Editor should include the following:

- Letter of Application
- Vitae of Editor and any deputy editors
- A statement of support from the Editor(s)’ host institution
- A statement of editorial philosophy and plan for the journal during the Editor’s tenure

Because of the international nature of the, the Editor must include a process that encourages international submissions. The current editorial collective included an Editor-in-Chief and two reviewing editors – one for North America and one for Europe. Although the new Editor (editorial collective) can follow this model, it is not a requirement. The Editor should simply present a plan for international coverage and submission. A plan to include Asia, Australia, and Africa would be received favorably.

Questions about the duties, responsibilities, and publication process should be directed to: Jeffery T. Walker, Editor-in-Chief, Critical Criminology, Department of Criminal Justice, University of Arkansas, Little Rock  JTWALKER@UALR.EDU

Applications and supporting material should be sent to: Walter DeKeseredy, Chair, Division of Critical Criminology, Sociology and Anthropology, Ohio University, 287 Lindley Hall, Athens, OH 45701 dekesere@ohiou.edu

The deadline for receiving proposals is September 12, 2003. Selection of the new editorial collective will be made by the Division of Critical Criminology Executive Board. Announcement of the new editorial collective will be made at the ASC meeting in Denver.

DIVISION ON WOMEN AND CRIME

Student Paper Competition

Eligibility: Any student currently enrolled at the undergraduate or graduate level.

Paper Specifications: Papers must be about or related to feminist scholarship; gender issues; or women as offenders, victims or professionals. Papers must be no longer than 7500 words (30 pages) with an acceptable referencing format such as APA or MLA. Papers must contain an abstract of 100 words. Papers must be typed double-spaced and submitted with verification of student status. Papers by multiple authors are acceptable as long as all of the authors are students.

Deadline: Papers must be submitted by September 15, 2003 to the Awards Committee.

Judging: The Awards Committee will evaluate the papers based on significance of the topic, conceptualization, analysis (if appropriate) and clarity of the writing.

Award: A winner will be presented a $500.00 cash award and plaque by the Division on Women and Crime at the American Society of Criminology annual meeting in Denver, Colorado. In cases in which there are multiple authors, the award will be divided among the recipients.

Please provide 3 copies of submissions to: Angela M. Moe, Chair of DWC Student Paper Competition, Department of Sociology, Western Michigan University, 1903 W. Michigan Avenue, Kalamazoo, MI 49008-5257.

NEW LISTSERV FOR THE DIVISION ON WOMEN AND CRIME

Due to the heroic efforts of Kristin Parsons Winokur, the new listserv for the ASC Division on Women and Crime is now up and running (the previous one was deleted without warning from the server). The listserv is a great way to stay in touch with your colleagues in the Division. It provides a forum for members who are seeking or would like to offer information on a variety of topics related to women, crime, justice, academia, research, professional endeavors, etc. If you would like to subscribe to the listserv, simply click on the following link and follow the on-screen instructions: http://lists.fsu.edu/mailman/listinfo/dwclisterv. We hope that you will find the new listserv to be user-friendly and easy to navigate. Please pass this information along to others, as we are essentially re-populating the original mailing list from scratch.

NEW RESEARCH INITIATIVE ON RESEARCH MISCONDUCT

The Office of Research Integrity [ORI], U. S. Department of Health and Human Services, is sponsoring an initiative to investigate issues in research integrity and misconduct. Funded by the National Institutes of health, this program has recently begun sponsoring research that addresses such questions as what organizational and professional factors influence research integrity and/or violations of the rules, regulations and codes of conduct that govern the research enterprise.

At this year’s Annual Meeting in Denver, a panel featuring Dr. Mary D. Scheetz, Ph.D., lead ORI official for the initiative, will discuss this program of research. Look for the Thursday afternoon session entitled, “Investigating Misconduct in Research: A New Federal Initiative.” For more information, contact Peter Cleary Yeager, session chair, at pcyeager@bu.edu.

JOB VACANCY ANNOUNCEMENT

Dean, College of Human Services

Arizona State University West seeks a dean to lead its College of Human Services. The College includes four departments -- Communication Studies, Criminal Justice and Criminology, Recreation and Tourism Management, and Social Work -- offering 5 undergraduate degrees, 3 graduate degrees, and several minors and certificate programs. It also hosts the ASU Gerontology program, a site for the ASU Nursing Program, and the ASU West Partnership for Community Development. Currently, 132 faculty and staff support 759 undergraduate majors and 208 graduate majors. Research and community service are salient features of the College mission. The College has a tradition of cultivating strong community relationships for the purposes of identifying financial supporters, community advisors, and internship opportunities. For details see www.west.asu.edu/chs

The dean reports directly to the Provost and works with other campus deans to provide administrative leadership to the campus and university. The dean must be committed to working with faculty — both through the administrative structure and faculty governance system — to achieve academic goals in research and learning and to further the goals of diversity, equal opportunity, and affirmative action. Responsibilities include budget, planning, development, personnel decisions, student academic affairs, faculty development, promotion of research, and planning and implementation of degree and non-degree programs.

Qualifications Required:
A successful candidate must exhibit leadership and strategic vision, and have:
• Relevant administrative experience.
• Proven success in promoting excellence in scholarship, teaching and community service.
• A demonstrated support of cultural diversity that includes supporting diversity of faculty, students and staff.
• Proven success in establishing community partnerships.
• Proven success in securing external funding.
• A terminal degree in a discipline and a strong record in research, teaching, and service that merits appointment as a Professor with tenure in a department of the College.

Qualifications Desired:
Preference will be given to candidates with demonstrated experience in:
• The integration of teaching, research, and service.
• Effective interpersonal and communication skills that promote a positive collegiality among college faculty and staff.
• Organizational change.
• Evaluation of faculty for promotion and tenure purposes.
• Budget management.
• Curriculum and program development and assessment.

Starting Date: January 1, 2004, or as negotiated.

Application Deadline: September 15, 2003; if not filled, Monday of each week thereafter until the search is closed.

Application Procedure: Applicants must address how they meet the qualifications listed above in their letters of application. Please send letters of application, curriculum vitae and the names, addresses and telephone numbers of three references to:

Dean Marilyn Myers, Chair, Search Committee

Confidentiality of all applications will be maintained.
References will be contacted only after permission from the candidate has been obtained.

Arizona State University West is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer that actively seeks diversity among applicants and promotes a diverse work force.

Arizona State University West, a vital component of ASU's multi-campus structure, serves nearly 7,000 students on its growing campus in Phoenix, the nation's sixth largest city with a dynamic multi-cultural environment. It is located in the Valley of the Sun, an area of striking natural beauty, within two hours drive to skiing in northern Arizona, three hours to the U.S./Mexico Border, and five hours to the beaches of southern California.

ASU West, a four-year urban campus, features a friendly, supportive atmosphere in the context of a nationally acclaimed, PAC-10 University. Courses at ASU West lead to 29 bachelor's degrees, nine master's degrees, and eight professional certificates through the colleges of Arts and Sciences, Education, Human Services and the School of Management.

The campus is dedicated to serving the evolving needs of high school graduates, working adults, returning and continuing students. Expanding campus facilities and programs along with a diverse student body, faculty, and staff, all contribute to a culturally rich academic and social campus environment.

The latest addition to the campus is a 400-bed, state-of-the-art student residence hall. Students have the opportunity to live in an environment designed specifically to integrate their living and learning experience in a residence that includes seminar rooms, computer facilities and a community center for student activities. A new Classroom and Laboratory Building, currently under construction, opens in Spring 2004 providing more than 100,000 additional square feet of space for classrooms with full computer and audio/video capabilities, science and computer teaching labs, and information technology offices.

ASU West's mission encompasses research and teaching, faculty-student research collaboration, interdisciplinary perspectives, and the development of university-community partnerships. Academic programs, classes, and student services are innovative and provide students with high-quality education.

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, FULLERTON
DIVISION OF POLITICAL SCIENCE AND CRIMINAL JUSTICE
COLLEGE OF HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES

CRIMINAL JUSTICE - POLICING
Tenure-Track

The Division of Political Science and Criminal Justice at California State University, Fullerton, invites applications for the position of Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice.

Position
We seek applicants specializing in Policing and with teaching and research interests in any of the following areas: Police and Society, Law Enforcement Administration, Investigation, Crime Reduction, and Community Policing. The successful candidate will be expected to contribute to the development of the Criminal Justice elective curriculum and to the integration of innovative teaching technologies into course materials. Assigned time may be available for activities such as instructional research, course development, and departmental responsibilities. Faculty members advise undergraduate students and serve on academic committees. Positive tenure and promotion decisions require excellence in teaching as well as research, publication in appropriate peer-reviewed venues, and participation in the broader disciplinary community.

Qualifications
A doctorate in Criminal Justice or related field is required. ABD's may apply but must show evidence that the degree will be completed by the time of appointment. Professional experience in the field of law enforcement is preferred but not required. Preference will be given to applicants who have demonstrated success in effective teaching at the college level. Candidates should be able to interact effectively with a wide and diverse range of students. Background or interest in a related area that will contribute to the development of the Criminal Justice elective curriculum is also desirable.

Rank and Salary
The position will be at the rank of Assistant Professor (tenure-track). Salary is competitive to rank, experience, and qualifications. Periodic salary adjustments are enacted by the state legislature. Additional teaching in summer and intersession is often available. Excellent comprehensive benefits are available and include health/vision/dental plans, spousal and/or dependent fee-waiver as well as access to campus child-care and new affordable housing program.

Application Procedure
Please send a letter of application, curriculum vitae, three letters of recommendation, evidence of teaching effectiveness (e.g., syllabi and evaluations), a sample of scholarly writing, and graduate transcript(s) to the Division Chair. Applicants who have additional expertise in other areas of Criminal Justice are requested to include a description of their qualifications and interests within the letter of application.

Application Deadline
Application review begins immediately. To receive full consideration, please submit all materials by October 1 2003. Position is open until filled. Send materials to:

Professor Alan Saltzstein
Chair, Division of Political Science and Criminal Justice

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

Professorship in Race and Ethnicity in the Americas
College of Social and Behavioral Sciences
The Ohio State University

The College of Social and Behavioral Sciences at The Ohio State University seeks applications for a senior Professor whose scholarly focus is on race and ethnicity in the Americas. The position is open to candidates from all of the disciplines in the College. An appointment may be made in a single department or in multiple departments, as appropriate.

The College has 9 academic units: Anthropology, Economics, Geography, Journalism/Communication, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Public Policy and Management, and Speech and Hearing Science. The College also houses five interdisciplinary research units: the Criminal Justice Research Center, the Center for Human Resource Research, the Center for Survey Research, the Center for Urban and Regional Analysis, and the Initiative in Population Research. All of these units, which sponsor and foster collaborative research efforts, could be relevant to the new professor, depending on his or her specific research program.

The new Professor will find a number of colleagues already at Ohio State with well-defined interests in various aspects of race and ethnicity. He or she will also be an important figure in helping attract additional scholars to Ohio State with interests in race and ethnicity.

The appointee will also have the opportunity to participate in the activities of the newly-formed Kirwan Institute for Race and Ethnicity in the Americas, a multidisciplinary center founded jointly by the Colleges of Social and Behavioral Sciences, Humanities, and Law. The Institute brings together scholars from all parts of the university with a common interest in research into issues of race and ethnicity.

The University is located in the state capital of Ohio, Columbus, with a metropolitan population of about 1.25 million. This location affords many opportunities for collaboration with local, state, federal, and nonprofit agencies and organizations, and the community offers a high quality of life for both individuals and families.

Candidates for the position should have a record of excellence in scholarly publications, teaching, and service in an area relevant to the study of race and ethnicity in the Americas. Academic credentials appropriate for appointment as a full professor in the College are required. Applicants should submit curriculum vitae and names of three references to:

Janet M. Weisenberger, Ph.D., Associate Dean
Chair, Search Committee
College of Social and Behavioral Sciences
Ohio State University
1010 Derby Hall
154 N. Oval Mall
Columbus, OH 43210
(614) 688-3167
(614) 292-9530 (fax)
jan+@osu.edu (email)

For full consideration, applications should be received by October 31, 2003; review of applications will continue until the position is filled.

The Ohio State University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer. Qualified women, minorities, Vietnam-era Veterans, disabled veterans and the disabled are encouraged to apply.

CALL FOR PAPERS

CONTEMPORARY JUSTICE REVIEW

The Contemporary Justice Review, a Routledge publication, is an interdisciplinary journal for scholars, practitioners, and activists around the globe who seek to explore new models and demonstration projects of justice that have applicability for creating just social arrangements at the local to the international level. The editors are seeking cutting-edge articles on social and restorative justice theory and practice; peacemaking criminology; community building as harm prevention; structural alternatives to nation-state and corporate violence; conflict resolution and peaceful methods of problem-solving; environmental justice; and issues of justice in the family, school, and workplace. Articles that offer nonviolent, needs-based solutions to needs-denying and power-based social arrangements are also sought after.

The journal reflects a variety of formats including scholarly articles; electronic roundtable discussions among scholars and activists; interviews on social and restorative justice; narrative histories on crime and punishment; film and book reviews; and justice watch statements on timely issues that affect the quality of life around the globe. The editors prefer articles written in engaging and accessible prose which avoid academic jargon and offer insights in how to foster justice in daily life.

For additional information on required manuscript format, please contact Editor-in-Chief, Dennis Sullivan <sezell@global2000.net> or Managing Editor, Lisa Trubitt <trubitt@albany.edu> Completed manuscripts can be sent to: Lisa Trubitt, University at Albany, MSC 209, 1400 Washington Avenue, Albany, NY 12222, FAX: 518/437-3810.
British Society of Criminology Annual Meeting Report
by
Candace Kruttschnitt
ASC Vice-President

I attended the recent British Society of Criminology meetings (June 24-26; University of Wales, Bangor) as an ASC ambassador. My duties included staffing a table with a number of ASC publications and brochures, and serving as the host of the ASC sponsored morning coffee break. I also presented a paper at one of the sessions. My participation in the formal program turned out to be quite fortuitous and very rewarding. I found that by participating in the meeting, I was approached by many members of the BSC and I was able to make a number of contacts. Because the BSC meeting is small, they have the luxury of starting sessions later in the morning (9:30 am) and providing a number of welcome breaks and time for socializing. Participants were extremely welcoming and the sessions were generally very interesting and very well attended, especially the plenary sessions where Professors Frank Zimring, Dirk Van Zyl Smit and Jock Young spoke.

I would strongly encourage our members to attend future BSC meetings. Not only will our attendance help to strengthen and potentially diversify ASC and BSC membership, but it will also broaden our understanding of the depth and diversity of criminological research. The BSC web site can be accessed at www.britsoccrim.org/

TRENDS IN ORGANIZED CRIME
Trends in Organized Crime offers a composite of analyses and syntheses from a variety of information sources to serve the interests of both practitioners and policy makers as well as the academic community. It is both a stimulus to and a forum for more rigorous empirical research on organized crime, both nationally and internationally. Published four times a year, Trends in Organized Crime is the official journal of the International Association for the Study of Organized Crime (IASC). It has a distinguished international editorial board. Trends publishes peer-reviewed, academically rigorous research, excerpts significant governmental reports; offers reviews of major new books, and presents analyses and commentary on current issues in organized crime. Manuscripts must be submitted in English, in either electronic or hard copy forms. Electronic submissions should be sent to <finckena@aol.com> as either ASCII, RTF or Word files. If hard copy, submit four copies to Professor James O. Finckenauer, Editor, Trends in Organized Crime, 389 Sayre Drive, Princeton, NJ 08540. For further information, contact the Editor at the above addresses, or at 973-353-3301.

CALL FOR BOOK PROPOSALS AND MANUSCRIPTS
A new series from Southern Illinois University Press: The Contemporary Studies in Crime and Justice series will provide a diverse sphere of coverage in criminology and criminal justice. The theoretical works for the series will either significantly build on past criminological theory or represent a substantial "paradigm shift." Those applied works selected for the series will focus on important criminal justice policy questions that have not yet received adequate coverage in the scholarly literature. The series welcomes submissions from scholars from a variety of backgrounds. Queries and submissions should be directed to: Dr. Shaun L. Gabbidon Criminal Justice Program, School of Public Affairs, Pennsylvania State University, Capital College, 777 W. Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057, 717/948-6054; 717/948-6320 Fax; Slg13@psu.edu

CRIMINAL JUSTICE: The International Journal of Policy and Practice
This is a peer-reviewed journal that will include scholarly articles that focus on the policy-making process, current criminal justice policies and practices, and the gap that sometimes exists between policy and practice. It will also include regular features on policy development and national practice initiatives and a book review section. For submission details, contact the following. Regarding papers from Europe, contact Tim Newburn (t.newburn@gold.ac.uk). Regarding papers from Australia, contact David Dixon (D.Dixon@unsw.edu.au). Regarding papers from the Americas, contact Martin D. Schwartz (schwartz@ohio.edu)

CRITICAL CRIMINOLOGY: AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL
This open call requests quality manuscripts pertaining to critical criminology in all its manifestations, including critical legal studies and social justice issues. We welcome qualitative and quantitative methodologies, including non-traditional approaches to data gathering and analysis. Papers should expose and oppose forms of domination that include class, gender, race/ethnicity and sexual orientation — especially their intersecting and interlocking nature. We encourage works that focus on creative and cooperative solutions to justice problems, plus strategies for the construction of a more inclusive society. All manuscripts are subject to peer review. Papers should be 4,000 to 6,000 words (including tables, illustrations, notes and references) and framed in a manner that would be of interest to an international audience. Book reviews are also welcome and shorter research notes (3,000 words) will be considered for publication. Submissions not from North American or Europe are welcome and can be sent to any editor.

European/Continental Editor: Jock Young, Centre for Criminology, Middlesex University, Queensway, Enfield EN3 4SF, United Kingdom - j.young@mdx.ac.uk

North American Editor: Paul Leighton, Department of Sociology, Anthropology & Criminology, 712 Pray Harrold, Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti, MI 48197 - paul@stopviolence.com For more information see http://paulsjusticetemplate.com>Critical Criminology Journal

JOURNAL OF QUANTITATIVE CRIMINOLOGY
The Journal of Quantitative Criminology invites ASC members to submit their research to the journal. JQC publishes papers that use quantitative techniques to address substantive, methodological, or evaluative topics in criminology and criminal justice. While some articles are at the forefront of quantitative methodology, others apply familiar methods to substantively important topics. The Journal emphasizes the use of sound quantitative methods, not methodological sophistication for its own sake. Persons interested in submitting their work to JQC should send four copies of their manuscript to: Journal of Quantitative Criminology, School of Criminal Justice, University at Albany, State University of New York, Albany, NY 12222. Style guidelines and a sample copy are avail-

WESTERN CRIMINOLOGY REVIEW

The Western Criminology Review is the official journal of the Western Society of Criminology, and we invite all ASC members to submit their research to the journal. Published three times a year, WCR is an on-line, peer-reviewed outlet for scholarly research in all matters important to criminology and criminal justice. The journal is intended to reflect local (Western), national, and international concerns. Manuscripts are submitted electronically, and all correspondence is conducted online to speed the review process. Due to the advantages of being an online journal, there are no page, color, or appendix restrictions; therefore, authors can include hypertext links and images at their discretion. Our evaluation process of submitted papers involves a brief internal consideration by editorial staff, followed by a blind assessment by two external reviewers. Replies and Comments to previously published articles are encouraged. All submissions should be formatted according to the journal’s guidelines for manuscripts, which can be found on the WCR web-site at <http://wcr.sonoma.edu>. Persons interested in submitting their work to WCR should send inquiries to Gisela Bichler < gbichler@csusb.edu > or Stephen Tibbetts < stibbett@csusb.edu >, Co-Editors, Department of Criminal Justice, California State University-San Bernardino, 5500 University Parkway, San Bernardino, CA, 92407-2397.

In addition to regular issues, WCR will be publishing a Special Issue on Crime Analysis, which will be guest edited by Julie Wartell and Elizabeth Groff. This issue will be devoted to studies in the area of crime mapping and spatial analysis, as well as related issues. International submissions are encouraged. Those interested in submitting a manuscript for consideration should contact guest editor Julie Wartell at <jwartell@redlandspolice.org>. The deadline for submission for this special issue is October 15, 2003.

POLICE PRACTICE AND RESEARCH: An International Journal

Manuscripts are solicited for Police Practice and Research: An International Journal, which is published in four issues per volume. The journal presents current and innovative police research, as well as operational and administrative practices from around the world. Articles and reports are sought from practitioners, researchers, and others interested in developments in policing, analysis of public order, and the state of safety as it affects the quality of life everywhere.

The journal seeks to bridge the gap in knowledge that exists regarding who the police are, what they do, and how they maintain order, administer laws, and serve their communities. Attention is also focused on specific organizational information about the police in different countries and regions, and periodic special issues are devoted to studying police policies and practices regarding a particular topic or issue. The editors aim to improve cooperation between those who are active in the field and those who are involved in academic research, as such a relationship is essential for innovative police work. To this end, the editors encourage the submission of articles co-authored by police practitioners and researchers that highlights a particular subject from both points of view.

Submission of Manuscripts: Manuscripts should be no more than 30 typed, double-spaced pages with text presented on one side of paper in English. The manuscripts should be accompanied by an abstract of no more than 100 words, up to six key words, and a brief biographical sketch. For a complete Notes for Contributors, contact: Arvind Verma, Managing Editor, Department of Criminal Justice, Indiana University, Bloomington, IN 47405, USA, or any other member of the Journal team.

CRIMINOLOGY AND PUBLIC POLICY
The new American Society of Criminology journal, Criminology & Public Policy, is currently accepting manuscripts for consideration. Criminology & Public Policy is a peer-review journal devoted to the study of criminal justice policy and practice. The central objective of the journal is to strengthen the role of research findings in the formulation of crime and justice policy by publishing empirically based, policy focused articles. Authors are encouraged to submit papers that contribute to a more informed dialogue about policies and their empirical bases. Papers suitable for APP not only present their findings but explore the policy-relevant implications of those findings. Appropriate papers (1) empirically evaluate criminal justice policy or practice, (2) provide scientific support for new policies or practices, or (3) review existing research from a policy framework. Criminology & Public Policy only considers original manuscripts which have not been previously published and are not currently under consideration elsewhere. Manuscripts should be typewritten, double-spaced and limited to 30 pages, including tables and figures. Style sheets are available upon request. Please submit five hard-copies and one electronic copy of the manuscript, an abstract of approximately 150 words, and a brief biographical sketch of the authors including contact information (address, phone number and email), affiliation, recent publications and research interests. Contact: Todd Clear, Editor, Criminology and Public Policy, John Jay College of Criminal Justice, 555 West 57th Street, Room 603, New York, NY 10019-2925; 212-237-8988; cjrr@jjay.cuny.edu.

JOURNAL OF OFFENDER REHABILITATION

Now entering its third decade of publication, the Journal of Offender Rehabilitation continues to serve the needs of professionals in the areas of criminal justice, corrections, and social services. Each issue features a special “focus” around which the principal proportion of its contents is organized. Its contents are further organized around the broad recurrent foci of measurement and appraisal in offender rehabilitation; clinical practices in offender rehabilitation; professional roles in offender rehabilitation; policy and program evaluation; special populations (e.g., delinquents, women, etc.); special problems; new approaches; and new conceptual paradigms. Four copies of the manuscript should be submitted. The manuscript should be approximately 5–50 pages double-spaced with a one-inch margin on all four sides and should include an abstract of 100 words, a title page, and a brief biographical sketch of author(s). References, citations, and general style of manuscripts should follow the APA style (as outlined in the latest edition of Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association.) References should be double-spaced and placed in alphabetical order. Send all requests and manuscripts to: Nathaniel J. CALL FOR FILM REVIEWS - CONTEMPORARY JUSTICE REVIEW

The editors of Contemporary Justice Review would like to invite its readers, scholars from all disciplines, activists, practitioners of justice, and others interested in issues of justice to submit film reviews for publication in the journal. Reviewers might select any film that deals with issues of justice defined in the broadest sense. This might include films that depict people having their rights, needs, and well-being denied by others—individuals, the state, and corporate institutions. It might also include films that demonstrate how people's needs are met and personal well-being fostered through alternative primary social institutions such as the family, school, and community. Authors who might also wish to examine the oeuvre of a particular director, illustrating the extent to which that director's work contributes to a sense of justice as equality, human development, and personal well-being. Or several films might be compared for how they differentially depict people being marginalized and denied voice, or on the contrary, included and listened to. This might involve clarifying the effects of popular culture and the media on how we view certain aspects of justice as important and others not. CJR has a keen interest in offering its readers insights into life portrayed in international films, especially those that bring to light the effects of globalization, oppressive regimes, and nation-state terrorism on the quality of life of individuals, families, schools, the workplace, and neighborhoods. With respect to harm, some of the reviews might deal with how a particular film casts some people as worthy victims—that is, people worthy of our attention—and others as not. Reviewers should keep in mind that the purpose of the reviews is not primarily to offer pedagogical tools to teachers but simply to clarify and expand upon particular aspects of justice within films. However, reviewers might choose to demonstrate how a particular film could be valuable to teachers for use in a classroom to illustrate a particular aspect of justice. The length of reviews should be between 750 and 1500 words. Longer reviews will be considered from time to time as Review Essays. For additional information on review specifications, please contact Contemporary Justice Review Film Review Editor Julie Stump. Voorheesville Public Library, Voorheesville, New York 12186; Tel 518-765-2791; E-mail: stumpj@uhls.lib.ny.us.

CORRECTIONS COMPENDIUM

ACA Seeks Article Submissions for Peer-Reviewed Research Journal

Have you just completed a research study or scholarly essay that you think would be of interest to those in corrections? Corrections Compendium, the monthly journal of the American Correctional Association, is seeking submissions for upcoming issues. Its international readership includes individuals involved in various sectors of the corrections and criminal justice fields, including individuals employed in academia, correctional institutions and community corrections, to those in probation and parole and juvenile services. A leading peer-reviewed publication in the corrections field, Compendium welcomes you to submit your research-based papers for possible publication. We are open to submissions on all subjects—provided that they relate to corrections and adhere to standards of quality scholarship. A typical article is approximately 3,000 to 6,000 words, excluding references, endnotes, tables, charts, etc. All submissions are reviewed by members of our editorial advisory board. Articles must not have been published elsewhere or be under consideration by another publication. A complete listing of guidelines can be found on our Web site at www.aca.org. Do you think you may have just what we are looking for? If so, please send your article on an IBM-compatible disk in WordPerfect or Microsoft Word format, double spaced, with any tables or charts at the end of the copy, and accompanied by a hard copy to: Susan Clayton, Managing Editor, American Correctional Association, 4380 Forbes Boulevard, Lanham, MD 20706-4322; or e-mail it to: susanc@aca.org. Please remember to include your name, title, affiliation, address, daytime telephone number, fax number and e-mail address.
Criminology & Public Policy

is currently accepting manuscripts for publication consideration.

One of the most significant challenges facing criminal justice policy makers is to build justice policy in ways that reflect knowledge of the most recent and important crime and justice research. There is a familiar complaint among crime and justice researchers that contemporary policy fails to reflect what we know from research studies. Yet policy makers often object that policy-relevant findings are not accessible in ways that fit the policy development process. As the scope and depth of knowledge about crime and justice increases steadily, the gap between policy and knowledge appears to widen.

The American Society of Criminology’s journal Criminology & Public Policy was established two years ago as an avenue for bridging the gap between scientifically sound, policy-related research and criminal justice policy. The central objective of the journal is to strengthen the role of research findings in the formulation of crime and justice policy by publishing empirically based, policy-focused articles. Authors are encouraged to submit papers that contribute to a more informed dialogue about policies and their empirical bases.

Criminology & Public Policy only considers original manuscripts which have not been previously published and are not currently under consideration elsewhere. Manuscripts should be typed, double-spaced and limited to 30 pages, including tables and figures. Style sheets are available on our website. Please submit five hard-copies and one electronic copy of the manuscript (either as an email attachment or on a floppy diskette), an abstract of approximately 100 words divided into two sections highlighting the ‘Research Findings’ and ‘Policy Implications’ (see style sheet), and a brief biographical sketch of the author(s) including affiliation, recent publications and research interests. Author identifications should only be appear on the title and biographical sketch pages. Manuscripts must be accompanied by a nonrefundable $10 submission fee (payable to the American Society of Criminology).
