“IT AIN’T HAPPENING HERE”: WORKING TO UNDERSTAND PRISON RAPE

JESSIE L. KRIENERT, Illinois State University
MARK S. FLEISHER, Case Western Reserve University

The complexities of capturing a crisp understanding of prison rape have long stymied prison researchers and correctional administrators. Prison researchers do, however, share the common opinion that prison rape may be the single-most difficult social problem confronting modern American correctional administration and management, as well as an extremely difficult research topic. Nevertheless, the safety of prison inmates and staff and institution security depends on a well-rounded grasp of prison rape as it influences and is influenced by the behavior of prison inmates.

Hollywood and newspaper editorials as well as former inmates’ allegations of sexual assault, sexual coercion, rape and sexual slavery have slowly imprinted on America’s collective psyche the illusion that prison rape is a nearly inescapable consequence of imprisonment. Prison rape researchers, it seems, often assume prison rape’s inevitability formulating research questions addressing how many rapists exist and how many victims have been raped over their terms of imprisonment. Answers to such research questions are alarming, prison rape prevalence rates reach as high as 30 to 40 percent. In real terms, that means 300 to 400 out of 1,000 inmates are raped. If we assume the soundness of prison rape research design (which is a huge assumption) we are puzzled as to how inmates and correctional administrators who oversee penitentiaries housing two, three, four thousand and more inmates are paroled and leave work, respectively, without suffering the severe symptoms of PTSD and other psychological and emotional consequences of witnessing and managing violent incidents.

The Current Study
Our study comes from the Prison Rape Elimination Act (PREA) and was set forth to gain a cultural understanding of prison rape and sexual behavior. We gathered narrative verbal data in formal interviews with men inmates in close custody and high-security institutions and with women inmates in close and medium custody across the United States. Our data are verbal narratives elicited in structured interviews in prison in each region of the country. Interviews range from 90 minutes to six or seven hours. We currently have 533 interviews, which is equivalent to interviewing 40 hours per week for five straight months. This data set is the largest and most comprehensive narrative data set assembled to date. Interviews covered a range of topics linked to prison rape, its context of occurrence and its sociocultural interpretation with the objective of finding inmates’ rules of cultural logic that create meanings of prison rape.

Unlike other interview-based studies of prison rape, ours is replicable: we used a strict design to select inmates; we learned to type very fast and have near verbatim and verbatim spoken text; resulting in text from men and women inmates who have been in prison from several months to well over 30 years. Taking the growing narrative data set we used an inductive method to create a range of themes partitioned in major subsets, such as ‘organizational’ ways to prevent/intervene on rape, types of rape, locations of rape, social processes leading to rape, and inmates mechanisms to achieve self-protection from rape.

While such an analytic procedure is often applied in varieties of cultural anthropology and anthropological linguistics, our research is the first use of this inductive procedure to study prison rape/sex narrative. Such an analytic procedure allows us to capture cultural behavior and cultural meaning. Don’t misunderstand, however, cultural behavior is not necessarily equivalent to actual behavior; people say things they don’t do, do things they don’t talk about, misinterpret their own behavior, and guess at what others do. Nevertheless, these four options are cultural data, in the sense that culture determines what’s done and what’s said, and determines culturally appropriate guesses and misinterpretations.

Forming a Cultural Definition of Rape

We assume prisons are cultural entities separate from but related to mainstream culture, because inmates grew up outside prison. When inmates enter prison as juveniles and adults they carry a limited knowledge of prison. New inmates have the same misconceptions about the prevalence of prison rape as others who have no firsthand experience in prison social life. Inmates say they learn about prison rape from television shows and from cronies, family and friends who’ve been to prison (or not), and in long periods in jails, where ‘old school’ inmates relish terrorizing young inmates with tales of prison rape, boys and daddies, sex slavery, and queens running rampant in short skirts carrying purses. Then, when they arrive at new-inmate orientation they are likely to be told that they’ll be raped or someone will sexually manipulate them and they’ll end up repaying cigarette, candy, and gambling debts with sexual acts.

Such tales do, indeed, make great television and movies; after all, isn’t it true that some percentage of citizens believe that inmates are no more than social throw-aways and deserve whatever punishment they get, including inmate-on-inmate rape? When inmates arrive at prison they believe those things too; however, in a matter of weeks their perception of prison social life dramatically changes when they don’t experience an orgy of inmate rape but rather find a niche in a social community where the majority of men or women want to stay safe and out of trouble. Our data unequivocally find that men and women inmates are expressly certain on the consequences of prison rape, especially now that PREA mandates have been enacted.

Inmate Social Control

A rapist cannot hide; inmates aren’t afraid of them, rather they consider rapists to be weak and cowardly. Snitches are everywhere, ready to give up the names of sexually abusive men or women. Our data clearly show that inmates aren’t apathetic felons whose lives are so selfish they cannot think about others’ safety; the fact is, inmates everywhere say they do intervene to prevent sexual manipulation and rape.

That statement makes sense in the context of prison inmates’ social ties. Our data find that inmates in prison know one another through street and family social ties. One man we interviewed protected a former cellmate’s son from harm. Father and sons, mothers and daughters, cousins and siblings, and neighborhood friends are among many of the ways that link inmates to one another to form protective, social, and supportive bonds.

A major finding of our research is that inmate populations across the United States express the strong theme of institutional informal social control, a social force to maintain peace and safety in prison. Inmates say why would prison social life be otherwise? Why would inmates allow the extreme disruption to their social environment caused by hundreds and hundreds of rapes? Were 300 to 400 inmates to fall victim to rape, prisons would remain locked down all day, every day, and no one, especially men and women serving long terms, wants their daily privileges expunged, giving up recreation and visiting, and having to face bologna sandwiches three times a day.

National Prison Culture
Our sociolinguistic analysis of rape narratives finds shared thematic regularities. When inmates answer questions about rape and more generally social life and sexuality, their narratives show similar structure and shared cultural meaning. This finding has significance in the evolution of a national prison inmate culture over decades of prison history in America. Content analysis shows corrections agencies’ unique history finds its way into state rape narratives. Inmates associate the termination of the perception of rape to a particular riot or period of administration that enacted major managerial changes. It is common to hear that rape doesn’t occur in the prison where we interview but surely does in some other prison. When we went to the other mentioned prison, we heard the same story. We find that inmates say some states versus others are well known for their high prevalence of rape. When we visited those places, we heard narratives we heard before; rape is always someplace else. It is fair to say that prison rape narratives across the country share far more content similarities than dissimilarities.

In fact, our data do not show a single substantive contradictory finding on the causes, conditions and responses to prison rape. When inmates were asked to talk about the difference between being turned out and raped, there was almost no content variation in 500-plus responses. Being turned out has been most common, non-violent, and manipulative; rape is quick and violent. Turn-out artists and rapists are the same and different in like ways across the country.

Skeptics might say inmate interviewees lied to us. For that to be true, 500-plus inmates would have to have known that we were funded by the National Institute of Justice to conduct a study of the culture of prison rape. Once knowing that, they had to know they were going to be interviewed at some time in the next 18 months; and they had to find a way to meet at a common location, read and discuss our interview questions, and decide on appropriate shared answers.

Surely there is a lot to distrust in interview-based prison rape research. A review of 70 years of prison rape literature finds that most researchers don’t report research designs. Prior prison rape research is often based on the comments of four, five or six inmates and then those comments are used as the basis of sweeping generalizations, which, ironically, we accept as true and then repeat. Fishman (1930) gives a pseudo-Freudian interpretation and suggests unresolved Oedipal urges are a motive of same-sex relations. Sykes (1958) tells us, based on virtually no data, that men have sex with men because they cannot have sex with women. We cannot find a better example of the powerful influence of ethnocentrism on prison sex and rape research.

Common patterns and themes emerge again and again in interviews with men or women inmates who were randomly sampled in high- and medium-security prisons. One of the most common themes, which emerged in several hundred hours of narratives with men and women inmates across the United States, is that in their aggregate experience of many hundreds of years in prison, inmates have not personally observed prison rape nor do they know inmates who were rapists or prison rape victims.

If we accept the assumption that rape is uncommon in today’s prisons, we have to wonder why the cultural themes comprising rape narratives remains so firmly embedded in prison culture. Our analysis of the semantics of rape narratives find that rape myths encapsulate norms, values, social roles, social boundaries, normative boundaries on social interaction, and, generally speaking, the requirements of social security. Inmates learn the danger of incurring debts, acceptable protocols for social interaction, and mechanisms of personal safety. Whether rape occurs infrequently or not doesn’t alter the metaphorical content of rape narratives. To be sure, talking about rape catches inmates’ attention, perhaps too much so; nevertheless, the truth of assertions and accuracy of reporting take a back seat to listening and to some extent believing the content of rape narratives. Belief in rape narrative’s content is all that’s necessary to convey culturally significant messages.

Narrative data report few direct observations or firsthand knowledge of rape. Over decades inside many prisons in different states, most narratives report that rape used to happen but doesn’t often occur now. Yet, inmates’ thinking has been shaped by listening to talk about rape. Differentiating inmates’ firsthand knowledge of rape from what they they have learned through cell-block conversations is captured in the following excerpt from an interview with an inmate who had served 15 years in a maximum-security men’s prison.

Interviewer: How many prison rapes have you seen firsthand?
   Inmate: None.

Interviewer: How many prison rapists have you known?
   Inmate: None.

Interviewer: How many prison rape victims have you known?
   Inmate: I knew a few dudes but they liked to be taken and that kind of sex looks like rape.

Interviewer: How many friends do you have who have seen firsthand a prison rape?
   Inmate: None.

Interviewer: Have you ever overhead an incident that could have been a rape?
   Inmate: I heard things but rape could sound like assault and murder.

Interviewer: So you cannot be sure what you heard was a rape?
   Inmate: I can’t be sure.

Interviewer: If you had to tell outsiders – like folks who don’t know much about life inside a prison – how often prison rape happens, what would you say?
   Inmate: I’d say it happens a lot.

Interviewer: If you put a percentage on “a lot” what would that percentage be? What percentages of inmates were raped in your experience of 15 years in prison?
   Inmate: I’d say about 70 percent.

Interviewer: You just said you have never seen a rape or know anyone who has seen rape or known a rapist or a rape victim. How can you say that 70 percent of inmates are raped?
   Inmate: Hey, rape got to be happening somewhere.

The demonstrable influence of listening to talk about prison rape, inside and outside prison, comes in the following excerpt taken from a 2004 interview with a 20 year old inmate.

Interviewer: Does rape occur in this prison?
   Inmate: Yes.

Interviewer: When did the most recent rape you know about occur?
   Inmate: During the riot.

Interviewer: Were you here during the riot?
   Inmate: No, that was in the 80s, the place was really rocking back then.

Prison and community rape are abhorrent acts; however, they are neither similar experiences in different contexts nor similar experiences distinguished by different forms of verbal expression. Rather, prison rape has its own logic that creates its own reality.

Number use is culturally patterned. The most common numeric expression is “nine out of ten.” “Four out of five” occurs too, but much less often. These numeric expressions aren’t quantitative assessment, but rather exclamatory expressions, such as ‘dressed to the nines,’ Inmates’ understanding of numeric expressions is limited at best. When inmates said, for example, 35 percent of inmates do something, we’d ask how many inmates would that be in a group of 1,000. Few knew. This isn’t surprising, given the very low levels of education in inmate general populations.
Our research does not dispute allegations of prison rape or argue that prison rape doesn’t occur. We have systematically collected hundreds of hours of inmates’ thoughts on prison rape and analyzed those thoughts as they are expressed in verbal narratives. Our treatment of narrative analysis seeks to understand how inmates perceive their cultural world. An inmate perhaps said it best:

“You have to realize the mentality of the inmates we’re dealing with; it’s one that is so unrealistic. They have their own logic and reality.”

2006 NOMINATIONS FOR ASC FELLOWS

The ASC Fellows Committee invites nominations for Fellows in the Society. This title is available to those members of the Society in good standing who have achieved distinction in criminology. The last meeting of the ASC Executive Board approved the following clarification of this distinction: "The honorary title "Fellow" recognizes persons who have made a scholarly contribution to the intellectual life of the discipline, whether in the form of a singular, major piece of scholarship or cumulative scholarly contributions. Longevity alone is not sufficient. In addition, a Fellow must have made a significant contribution to the field through the career development of other criminologists and/or through organizational activities within the ASC."

The names of those who have been awarded the Fellow status will be announced at the 2006 Annual Meeting and the candidates will be acknowledged by the Society with the presentation of a Certificate.

In your nominating letter, please describe the reasons for your nomination and include a copy of the nominees curriculum vitae (or make arrangements to have it sent to the Committee). All materials should be received by March 1, 2006. Send materials to:

Please Note: Changes to the ASC E-MAIL MENTORING PROGRAM

The ASC email mentoring program has undergone a number of changes, all of them good. For example, we now have a search feature that allows ASC students to search the site for mentors by specialization. So, type in the word theory (for instance) in the search bar and, voila, up pops all the mentors who do theory. Also, the site is more accessible than ever as well as being password protected.

Please examine the web site at http://ascmentor.anomie.com (or access it via the ASC main page). Let me know if you have any suggestions for improvement.

Current Mentors

If you have changed your affiliations, email addresses, or areas of specialization, please let me know and I make the updates. Also, if you want off the list, tell me and I’ll remove you.

Call for New Mentors

If you’d like to sign up for the ASC email mentoring program as a mentor, you need only to be an ASC non-student member. The program has been a very rewarding experience for those of us serving as mentors and we always welcome new people. We seek not only university faculty but also those working in research institutes (private or public), practitioners, and administrators in any field related to the discipline of Criminology. Students need mentors from a variety of specializations as well as various ages, races, and genders. Interested? Email me the following:

Name
Affiliation
Email address
Areas of specialization (e.g., women and crime, technology, community corrections, etc.)
Month and year of birth (optional)
Gender
Race/ethnicity

Students

The program is available and free to all ASC student members. We encourage you to make use of our over 80 top-notch national and international experts. The ASC developed the mentoring program in 1994, with the purpose being to link ASC students with experts in the field of Criminology outside their own universities. Students may ask mentors about career choices, research and theoretical issues, personal-professional concerns (such as what it’s like to be a minority Criminologist in a variety of work settings).

The ASC Email Mentor of the Year Award

Students, please nominate the mentor who has been most helpful to you via the ASC email mentoring program. I will forward your recommendation to the ASC Board. The award is then delivered at the ASC annual meetings, along with a nice plaque. Please make your nominations to me by September 1 of every year (not October 1, as I said in the last announcement).

Students and Mentors are encouraged to contact me at:

RICHARD E. TREMBLAY

Richard E. Tremblay is Canada Research Chair in Child Development, professor of Pediatrics/Psychiatry/Psychology, and director of the Research Unit on Children’s Psychosocial Maladjustment at the University of Montreal. Since the early 1980s he has been conducting a program of longitudinal and experimental studies, focusing on the physical, cognitive, emotional, and social development of children from conception onward, in order to gain a better understanding of the development and the prevention of antisocial and violent behavior. Director of the Centre of Excellence for Early Childhood Development, he is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, and the Molson Fellow of the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research. Member of the US National Consortium on Violence Research, he is a former member of the US OJJDP Study Group on Very Young Offenders, and of the US National Research Council Panel on Juvenile Crime Prevention, Treatment, and Control. Professor Tremblay has published more than 200 scientific articles, and 70 book chapters. With the Montreal Longitudinal-Experimental Study he and his colleagues have shown that intensive interventions at school entry can change the long-term behavior trajectories of aggressive kindergarten boys. His recent work, showing that most children initiate physical aggression during infancy, has led him to experiment prevention programs for pregnant women at risk of failing to provide the environment needed for a child to learn alternatives to physical aggression.

CALL FOR PAPERS
Asian Journal of Criminology: The First Volume

Dear colleagues,

I am writing to seek manuscripts for the new Asian Journal of Criminology to be published by Springer in 2006. The journal will be a significant contribution to the field. At present we are in the process of finalizing the details of the journal website, editorial arrangements and other matters of editorial policy. Ms Welmoed Spahr, Springer's publishing editor and I hope these details will be finalized over the next few months. Examples of the kind of journal website set-up by the publishers can be found by visiting Springer's Social Sciences publications at the link below: http://www.springeronline.com/sgw/cda/frontpage/0,11855,5-40384-0-0-0,00.html. Springer's online capabilities are impressive and are accessed by over 15 million visitors per annum.

Preparation for the first issue of the 1st volume is now underway and I would like to draw on your help. I would like to start by asking if you can submit a paper or suggest suitable manuscripts and assist with the review process. You are also welcome to recommend non-English papers previously published that may be worthy of translation and publication in English. After discussion with the publisher it is also hoped that a number of theme issues may be produced (e.g. juvenile delinquency, police accountability, drug abuse, correctional treatment etc.). Any suggestions or help in preparing a theme issue would be welcome. The journal seeks three types of articles for each issue. At this stage I want to be flexible about this proposed structure and also the word length recommended below is for guidance only:

4 - 6 original research articles (length 5,000-8,000 words).

1 or 2 ‘Research Notes’: designed to capture shorter manuscripts that contain valuable ideas and findings but are too limited in some aspects to qualify as a fully developed research article. This feature is especially useful to address our aims of helping to disseminate important findings or ideas from Asian authors to be presented to international audience (length approx 3000-5000 words).

1 or more ‘Practice Notes’: these ‘practice notes’ are primarily designed as an information resource about major non-English publications or Asian government reports (in the form of an English abstract or summary), criminology related organizations, societies, conferences, educational programs, major policy events, criminal cases, new legislation and other regional information for a world wide audience. The Practice Note will also include book reviews until such time as the journal can ascertain the feasibility of establishing a regular book review section (word length approx 800-2000).

Although we would welcome submissions at any time in order to have sufficient time for review, revision and publication manuscripts will need to be submitted and forwarded no later than December 31, 2005 for inclusion in the second issue.

I thus invite you and other authors who you may recommend to submit manuscripts electronically via Asian.crime@hkuec.hku.hk. Alternatively you may prefer to contact me directly (Prof. Rod Broadhurst – r.broadhurst@qut.edu.au); or send them via the Managing Editor of the journal, Dr. Lena Zhong - ylzhang@cityu.edu.hk. Manuscripts that need to be submitted by post should be sent to the Journal’s postal address along with an electronic version in Microsoft Word on floppy or compact disk. Authors should be guided by the APA style although manuscripts prepared in conventional legal style can be accepted. Finally, I thank all of you for your support and encouragement over the past several months. I have been struck by the strong interest shown by many scholars for an Asian focused publication and look forward with your help to publishing the first volume in 2006. Please do not hesitate to call or contact me on 617 3864 3189 or by email at any time about a work of interest.

Yours faithfully

Roderic Broadhurst, General Editor

CALL FOR PAPERS

Feminist Criminology

Editor: Susan F. Sharp, University of Oklahoma
Official Journal of the Division on Women and Crime of the American Society of Criminology

Feminist Criminology – an innovative new journal that is dedicated to research related to women, girls, and crime within the context of a feminist critique of criminology – will unveil its premier issue in January 2006. Published quarterly by Sage Publications as the official journal of the Division on Women and Crime of the American Society of Criminology, this international publication focuses on research and theory that highlights the gendered nature of crime. The feminist critique of criminology incorporates a perspective that the paths to crime differ for males and females. Therefore, research that uses sex as a control variable often fails to illuminate the factors that predict female criminality. Feminist Criminology provides a venue for articles that place women in the center of the research question, answering different questions than the mainstream approach of controlling for sex.

Feminist Criminology features research utilizing both quantitative and qualitative methodology and includes insightful topics such as

- Race, Ethnicity, and Gender Diversity in the Study of Women and Crime
- Cross-Cultural / International Perspectives on Women and Crime
- Women Working in the Criminal Justice Profession
- How Women Offenders Are Treated in the Criminal Justice System
- Women as Victims
- Feminist Theories of Crime

Feminist Criminology welcomes academics, practitioners, and researchers interested in studies that incorporate a feminist critique to the study of gender and crime to submit articles, reviews, or special issues proposals to the editor. Manuscripts involving empirical research, theoretical analysis, and practice-oriented papers will be considered as will essays on teaching, social action agencies, and book reviews on issues of gender and crime. Manuscripts will be peer-reviewed by the diverse and distinguished multi-disciplinary editorial board and should be submitted in electronic format, not exceeding 30 double-spaced typed pages, with a 100-word abstract and a brief autobiographical sketch. Figures, tables, and references must be on separate pages and should follow the format specified in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (5th Edition).

Submissions to Feminist Criminology should be sent directly to the editor via email. A $10.00 submission fee, made payable to the American Society of Criminology, should be mailed to: Susan F. Sharp, Ph.D., University of Oklahoma, 780 Van Vleet Oval, KH 331, Norman, OK 73019 Email: ssharp@ou.edu

JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY CRIMINAL JUSTICE
Special Issue: The Theory and Practice of Responding to Terrorism (May 2007 issue)
The Journal of Contemporary Criminal Justice invites individuals to submit manuscripts for consideration for inclusion in a planned special issue on the topic, The Theory and Practice of Responding to Terrorism. Particular focus will be upon the effect of terrorism on our justice system -- from policy and legal issues relating to civil liberties during terrorism investigations to policing, prosecution, and punishment of terrorist offenders. Inquiries about the appropriateness of topics should be directed to Brent Smith, JCCJ Guest Editor, via email at (bls@uark.edu) or telephone (479-575-3401). All manuscripts will be peer reviewed. Manuscripts should be no more than 25 typed, double-spaced pages including tables, figures and references. Manuscripts must be received no later than October 1, 2006. Please send four manuscript copies, along with the manuscript on disk, to Brent Smith, Department of Sociology and Criminal Justice, University of Arkansas, Old Main, Room 228, Fayetteville, Arkansas, 72701.

ANNALS OF THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE DEMOCRACY, CRIME AND JUSTICE
Special Issue Editors: Susanne Karstedt, Keele University, UK, and Gary LaFree, University of Maryland, USA
This volume seeks to consolidate and advance the study of democracy, crime and justice. We invite contributions from criminology, political science, sociology and related disciplines that explore the reciprocal connections between democratic institutions and processes and criminal behavior and criminal justice institutions. We seek broad coverage of these topics but with an emphasis on cross-national comparative approaches and democracies in transition. We plan to solicit both empirical and theoretical papers, and seek both cross-national comparative and case studies from both mature and newly emerging democracies and for a range of crime types and criminal justice institutions. The following questions suggest the breadth of topics to be addressed: Under what circumstances does the transition to democracy initiate a wave of crime and corruption? Is democracy, especially in the context of market economies, inherently criminogenic? How do responses to crime in both established and transitional democracies undermine civil liberties and affect public demands for restrictive changes in democratic institutions? How can transitional countries develop new democratic institutions and yet meet public demands for safety and security? How can criminal justice innovations (e.g., community crime prevention, restorative justice) be used to strengthen democracies? What new roles can communities develop for providing the moral order on which democracies rely and on which they thrive? How can principles of democratic governance be transferred to the supra- and international level in an increasingly globalized security environment? How do democratic states preserve and defend justice in the face of increasing threats from transnational crime and terrorism?
The editors plan to use the 14th World Congress of Criminology [Philadelphia, USA, 7-12 August 2005 (www.worldcriminology2005.com)] as an opportunity to identify papers for the volume. Timetable and deadlines: We plan to have a final list of contributors by November 30, 2005 and final manuscripts by June 30, 2006. Final acceptance of all manuscripts will be made by the Editors of the Annals. For more information, contact the special issue editors: Susanne Karstedt: s.karstedt@keele.ac.uk or Gary LaFree: glafree@msn.com

AMERICAN JOURNAL OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE
The Journal of the Southern Criminal Justice Association
Editorial Policy: The American Journal of Criminal Justice, sponsored by the Southern Criminal Justice Association, is a refereed publication and manuscripts go through a blind review process. The focus of AJCJ is on a wide array of criminal justice topics and issues. Some of these concerns include items pertaining to the criminal justice process, the formal and informal interplay between system components, problems and solutions experienced by various segments, innovative practices, policy development and implementation, evaluative research, the players engaged in these enterprises, and a wide assortment of other related interests. The AJCJ publishes original articles that utilize a broad range of methodologies and perspectives when examining crime, law, and criminal justice processing. Submission Procedures: The strongly preferred way for authors to transmit manuscripts is via e-mail (WordPerfect or Word format). Submissions sent through the postal service should include one hard copy of the manuscript along with an IBM-compatible file on a 3 1/2 inch disk. Manuscripts should include a title page listing the author(s) and affiliation(s) along with postal and e-mail addresses, an abstract page that does not exceed 150 words, and a brief biographical sketch of the author(s). Papers are not to exceed 25 pages in total length (including tables, figures, and references) and style should conform to that outlined in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (2001). Submission of a manuscript to AJCJ is regarded as a commitment to publish therein. Manuscripts submitted simultaneously to another journal will be rejected automatically. AJCJ is abstracted or indexed in Criminal Justice Periodical Index; Criminology, Penology, and Police Science Abstracts; International Political Science Abstracts; Psychological Abstracts; Public Affairs Information Service; and Sociological Abstracts. Address Manuscripts and Inquiries to: Brian K. Payne, PhD, Sociology and Criminal Justice, Old Dominion University, Norfolk, VA 23529, bpayne@odu.edu

The 2006 Directory of Minority Criminologists

Coming Soon!

All African-American (Black), Asian-American, Hispanic/Latino(a), and Native American Ph.D. faculty and administrators with doctorates in criminology, criminal justice, or closely related fields, as well as students pursing these degrees are asked to complete a data sheet for the Directory of Minority Criminologists, 2006 Edition.

Past editions in 1993, 1995, and 2000 have become popular references for university administrators who seek to recruit new faculty. Also the directory continues to be of significant value to researchers, practitioners, government and community leaders who seek the expertise of a diverse group of criminologists.

Please contact Everett B. Penn at pennev@uhcl.edu or Chinita A. Heard at cheard@stillman.edu for a data sheet before February 1, 2006. Your support of this important project will be deeply appreciated.

CALL FOR PAPERS
AFRICAN JOURNAL OF CRIMINOLOGY AND JUSTICE STUDIES

The African Journal of Criminology and Justice Studies, a new interdisciplinary online journal, invites contributions on issues relevant to criminology and justice systems of interest to Africans at home and the African Diaspora globally. Comparative studies or research on related fields, and pedagogical papers on how to develop criminology and criminal justice education in Africa are particularly welcome. The journal accepts research articles, policy analyses, commentaries or brief research notes. Particularly, it encourages articles on innovative theoretical, methodological and policy interventions that deepen the understanding of how to prevent or repair the crimes against humanity that people of African descent have suffered and how to reverse the crisis of over-representation that people of African descent continue to suffer in correctional institutions around the world.

AJCJS is published by the University of Maryland Eastern Shore. The length of most articles is 5,000-6,000 words (in double-spaced pages). Commentaries and research notes should be approximately half this length. Limited number of reviews per issue will also be accommodated. Submission instructions to authors are posted at the journal's website: http://www.umes.edu/ajcjs.

Publishers and authors who may want to send copies of their books for review should send 4-6 copies directly to the managing editor: Emmanuel Onyeozili, Dept. of Criminal Justice, 3015 Hazel Hall, University of Maryland Eastern Shore, Princess Anne, MD. 21853.

CALL FOR PAPERS

THEME: DEMOCRACY, CRIME, & JUSTICE

Program Co-Chairs:
DORIS MacKENZIE
University of Maryland
ALEX PIQUERO
University of Florida

asc2006@crim.umd.edu

PROGRAM SUBMISSION DEADLINE: MARCH 17, 2006

SUBMISSIONS: All abstracts will be submitted on-line through the ASC website at www.asc41.com/2006meeting. On the site you will be asked to indicate the type of submission you wish to make. Your choices will be the following:

Thematic Paper Panels: We strongly encourage program participants to submit completed panels. Because organized panels have the greatest thematic cohesion, these panels will be highlighted in the program and designated as Thematic Panels. For a panel you must submit titles and abstracts for all papers and all author information together. In order to encourage more interaction with session audiences, we suggest that each panel contain no more than four papers or three papers and a discussant. Division Chairs may request that specific thematic panels also be designated as division sponsored.

Individual Paper Presentations: Requires only the submission of a title and abstract. You must indicate whether you choose to present your paper in a standard panel or in a roundtable format.

Poster Presentations: Requires only the submission of a title and abstract. Posters should display data, policy analysis or theoretical work in a visually appealing poster format to encourage interactive communication. All poster sessions will be held late Thursday afternoon.

Roundtable Sessions: These sessions consist of three to six presenters on related topics. You must submit all presenter information and abstracts together. ASC provides no AV equipment for these sessions, which are generally less formal than standard panels. All roundtable sessions will be held at the same time in a large ballroom-type setting. If you expect large attendance for a session, a thematic panel might provide a better setting.
APPEARANCES ON PROGRAM

You may submit ONLY ONE FIRST AUTHOR PRESENTATION and one other appearance as either a chair or discussant on a standard panel. Appearances on the program as a co-author, as a poster presenter, and as a roundtable participant are unlimited.

The meetings are Wednesday through Saturday. Participants should plan to attend the entire time because we cannot honor personal preferences for day and time of panel presentations.

Program participants are expected to pre-register for the meetings by September 30, 2006. Pre registration materials will also be sent to you by September 2006. Failure to preregister may result in the removal of your paper from the program.

Please remember to submit only papers that are original and have not been published or presented elsewhere.

SUBMISSION DEADLINE

March 17, 2006 is the absolute deadline for thematic panels or regular panel presentations. Any submissions after that date can only be considered for poster or roundtable sessions, and may not be included in the printed program.

ABSTRACTS

All submissions must include abstracts. Abstracts must be limited to 200 words and should provide the general theme of the presentation and where relevant, the methods and results.

EQUIPMENT

This year LCD projectors will be available for all thematic sessions and all individual paper presentations in every meeting room to facilitate computer-based presentations (especially Power Point). However, presenters will need to bring their own personal computers or arrange for someone in your panel to bring a personal computer. In addition, all meeting rooms for paper sessions (both thematic and individual) will include overhead projectors. Please note that we cannot provide either LCD or overhead projectors for roundtable sessions.

GUIDELINES FOR ONLINE SUBMISSIONS

When you go online to submit your paper or panel, you will need to select a single sub-category within one of 25 broader categories listed below. Your choice will be important in determining the kind of panel on which you are placed, and it will also assist the program chairs in avoiding time conflicts for panels on similar topics to the extent possible.

Here are a few guidelines that may help you in selecting the most appropriate category and subcategory:
1. Please go through the entire list of categories, noting the sub-categories within each category, before making your selection. If you review the entire list, you are more likely to find your best fit than if you select the first category that seems appropriate.

2. In making your selection, focus on the aspect of your paper that you would describe as your primary concern in selecting the broad category. For example, if you would like to present a paper titled, “Police Responses to Domestic Disturbances in African American Neighborhoods,” you might submit under:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Category</th>
<th>Sub-Category</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Policing (XII)</td>
<td>Police Discretion and Decision-Making (77)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Women (V)</td>
<td>Violence Against or Victimization of Women (33)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Race/Ethnicity (VI)</td>
<td>Race/Ethnicity &amp; Victimization (36)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Social Institutions (IV)</td>
<td>Communities (21)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Criminal Justice Policy (XX)</td>
<td>Impact of Policies on Minorities (12)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Theory and Research on</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Violence (IX)</td>
<td>Domestic/Intimate/Family Violence (57)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

The most important choice for you is the choice of broad category. As the author of the paper, you should consider whether you are most interested in interacting with scholars who are involved in research on policing, on women, on race/ethnicity, on social institutions, on criminal justice policy, or on violence. Your broad category choice will determine the pool of papers into which your paper goes for panel formation, and therefore the kind of researchers with whom you will be presenting. The broad categories will also be considered when scheduling panels, in order to avoid having too many similar panels scheduled at the same time. Therefore, category selection is important even if you are submitting a fully formed panel. The sub-categories will be used to help program committee members refine the fit for panels.

3. If you find a category on the list that seems to be the appropriate choice for your paper, but do not find a sub-category that seems to fit, then you should choose “other” within the broad category. When your abstract is reviewed, your paper will be assigned to an appropriate panel within that category.

SECOND INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON CULTURAL CRIMINOLOGY
May 12-13, 2006
The Goodenough College
Mcklenburgh Square, London

The aim of the conference is to encourage intense and focused discussion on key issues. Key papers will be presented in one room, with each paper being responded to by a number of discussants. A key theme of this conference will be cultural criminology’s impact on the dynamics of positive social change. Alongside the general call for papers in any area of cultural criminology, we particularly invite contributions addressed to the following themes: why cultural criminology now?; is the practice of cultural criminology a form of political praxis?; what can cultural criminology learn from the political failings of the past?; what is our critical methodology?; where can cultural criminology take us? Importantly, CC2 will also strive to look and feel different to more traditional conferences, comprising formal papers, open informal “themed” discussion sessions, visual and filmic presentations, and papers by some of cultural criminology’s critics. Spaces for this event are limited due to the size of the room and the nature of the format. To reserve a place, those interested in attending should contact: k.j.

Data Analysis Workbooks for use in your Classroom

Then National Consortium on Violence Research (NCOVR) at Carnegie Mellon University provides various data workbooks for use by students. The workbooks introduce students to data resources available on the web and to basic statistical data analysis techniques. Problem sets in each workbook provide students with an opportunity to apply the techniques to real-world data.

VIOLENCE IN THE U.S. — DATA WORKBOOKS

INTRODUCTION
The Violence in the United States Workbooks provide students with an opportunity to explore various features of violent offending in the United States using a number of national data resources. The aim is to introduce students to data resources available on the internet and provide hands on experience in basic data analysis. Each workbook introduces a violence-related topic, provides links to online data, and provides a series of problem sets based on that data.

Data and analyses are organized around individual violence topics.
